Senators Reconsider

By Robert C. Albright.

In two successive votes the Senate Finance Committee yesterday sustained a Presidential warning against "jeopardizing" Secretary of State Hull's reciprocal trade agreements, decisively rejecting tariff riders to the Administration's salary tax bill.

Victory for the Hull trade program came with defeat of amendments increasing the tax on imported vegetable oils and fats, which the President declared would seriously impair four trade agreements, place a virtual embargo on these commodities and return to policies of "the disastrous Hawley-Smoot tariff act."

The President wrote Chairman Harrison, of the finance committee, he would veto the salary tax bill if the amendments were added. Shortly afterward the committee defeated, 13 to 9 and 12 to 7, the Connally and Bailey amendments increasing from three to five cents a pound the tax on imported fats and oils.

To Continue Fight

Notice that the fight to increase the tax on imported oils will be carried to the floor of the Senate was served by the National Grange, the United States Livestock Association, the National Cottonseed Products Association and the Domestic Fats and Oils Conference.

"The National Grange will join with other groups of American producers in asking the Senate as a whole to put the stamp of its approval on this honest and necessary piece of legislation," read a statement by Fred Brenckman, National Grange representative.

But Senators Connally, of Texas, and Bailey, of North Carolina, Democratic sponsors of the tax riders, were noncommittal on plans.

Garner Retires As Senate Hears Him Urged for '40

Rumblings of the Texas Presidential boom for Vice President Garner reached the Senate yesterday while Garner, blushing, hurried from the chamber.

Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, asked that the clerk read a resolution by the Texas Legislature calling on the States to instruct their convention delegates for Garner.

Garner, aware of the resolution's contents, stepped quickly from the rostrum and turned over his gavel to Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, Senate president pro tem.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, told the Senate he was "in hearty sympathy" with the resolution.

Sunshine Promised For Blossom Festival

BETTY McBRIDE, daughter of Col. Robert B. McBride, sees the cherry blossoms

Vanguard of Expected 500,000 Visitors Is in Capital; All Events Will Take Place as Scheduled

The Cherry Blossom Festival program will go on as scheduled, the committee announced last night.

Today may be so warm that Miss Peggy Townsend, the Cherry Blossom Queen, will not wear her ermine cape.

It will continue to be clear, so that no harm will come to her pale pink cherry-colored chiffon dress, or to her crown of cherry blossoms.

No showers will threaten the gossamer gowns of dancers who will greet the sunrise among the cherry trees in the Tidal Basin, or dampen the glistening instruments of musicians who will fill the air with music from time to time throughout the day.

The Weather Bureau promised all this yesterday afternoon, and the Cherry Blossom Festival Committee did its part by stating un-

Griffenhagen Urges D. C. Autonomy

Authority Proposed To Issue Bonds, Appropriate Funds, Operate Utilities

By James D. Secrest.

Authority for the District government to issue bonds, appropriate its own funds and own public utilities are included in the proposed municipal powers to be included in the Capital's charter if the Griffenhagen reorganization plan is adopted, it was learned yesterday.

These and other municipal powers are listed in a tentative draft prepared by Griffenhagen & Associates for the Kennedy sub-committee "for comments and suggestions for improvements."

Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said the draft is still being edited and will be subject to additional changes before and after being submitted to the sub-committee on reorganization next week.

Full City Power

The preliminary draft of 74 pages puts into legislative form all of the recommendations set forth in the Griffenhagen report, but it goes into considerably more detail with regard to the city council.

Powers enumerated for delegation to the District government by Congress include all those customarily exercised by a municipal corporation under a State charter. An additional paragraph says the District shall not be limited to the powers specified, but shall exercise all other reasonable and necessary functions of a city government.

The council membership is fixed at seven, and provision is made for retention of the two commissioners as original members, provided they meet requirements as to three years' residence. The salaries of the commissioners, however, would drop from $9,000 to the $2,500 specified for councilmen.

D. C. Would Get Mayor

Going beyond its original report, the Griffenhagen organization provides for election of a mayor and vice mayor by the council and stipulates that the mayor shall be the official and ceremonial head of the government.

While the first legislative provision offered for creation of the District Council stipulates that the members shall be appointed by the President, an alternate section is included in the tentative draft to be used if the committee should decide to recommend local suffrage.

Even under this set-up, however, the first members of the city council would be appointed by the President, and they in turn would decide the qualifications of voters who

Government Is No Place for 'Old War Horse,' Woman Says

Bertha Lonergan who 21 years ago got a college degree, a Phi Beta Kappa key and a yen to make a career of government service, yesterday told Senator Ellender's committee investigating Federal favoritism that she now works for $1,620 a year and that the Government is no place for an "old war horse."

"I want to find out something about these young horses," said Ellender, leaping into a case that alleged Miss Margaret Stanley, a niece of Special Assistant Attorney General William Stanley, to be working in the Justice Department without civil service status, and earning, after two years, a salary equal to Miss Lonergan's.

Ellender said that if subsequent investigation shows irregularity in the appointment of Miss Stanley, "I will have the person responsible reprimanded in the way some of these clerks are chastised."

With this case completed after more than an hour's hearing, Ellender whirled to Social Security Board cases in which witnesses, confronting John J. Corson, director, Bureau of Old-Age Insurance, and Robert M. Barnett, personnel

Industrialize, Roosevelt Tells South

Problem Is to Get 'Out of Hock to the North,' Use Own Capital, He Says

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., March 30.—President Roosevelt began a ten-day vacation at his Pine Mountain cottage here today after asserting in one of four speeches in nearby Alabama that the South faced the economic problem of getting "out of hock to the North."

From an automobile rostrum before gray-clad cadets on Alabama Polytechnic Institute's Bullard Field, the President again took cognizance of affairs in this part of the country, which was termed in a New Deal report the "Nation's economic problem No. 1," and asserted:

"I don't believe that the South is so broke that it cannot put its own capital into the establishment of its own enterprises."

Declaring when he first came to Warm Springs nearly 16 years ago he had to buy milk and cream, apples, meat and shoes that originated in the North and West, he went on to say there "wasn't very much change in that system of economy until about six years ago. It was then we began to ask ourselves, 'Why is all this necessary?'

Gain in Six Years

"I think that we have done more in those six years than in the previous 60 years all through these Southern States to make them self-supporting, to give them a balanced economy that will spell a higher wage scale, a greater purchasing power and a more abundant life than they have had in all their history."

But, said the President, speaking informally, as in all his talks in eastern Alabama during the day, much remained to be done. He added:

"It means a lot of work. It means, incidentally, getting the South out of hock to the North. It means establishing your own enterprises down here with your own capital."

Stressing the need for soil conservation, Mr. Roosevelt told the students he had been talking about land with Gov. Frank M. Dixon, Senator Lister Hill, and Representative Henry B. Steagall, of Alabama, en route to Auburn from Tuskegee.

Horrified by Soil Needs

"I have been horrified, as I always am horrified," he said, "at all that needs to be done in the future to conserve the soil of the South. That is one of the great problems that lies with this generation and with you of the coming generation.

"That is part of the necessary economy if the South is to survive."

The President said the students had a great responsibility to devise "new methods, new means—experiments, if you like—in order to improve the conditions during your own lifetime."

"I believe this country is going somewhere, but it must depend for its future progress and prosperity very largely on the younger generation, the people under 30, the people who have got American ideals and are not afraid of trying new things," he added.

By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

Rome, March 30.—Many queries have been put as to Italy's views, her intentions and her attitude with regard to the European situation. There are two distinct factors in Europe—the accomplished facts—that is, the profound upheavals which have taken place in central Europe—and the facts not yet accomplished but already in part defined and announced, namely, the Italian, German and Polish colonial claims. On all these subjects complete frankness is necessary.

There is no need to dwell on what has already been done. My opinion is that notwithstanding reactions in diplomatic quarters and loud protestations on the part of the press, the Czecho-Slovak affair will have soon lost its acute aspect and be forgotten.

Has Twofold Aspect

It is merely a further episode of the revision of the European system created by the peace treaties, a tendency recognized and supported by Mussolini as early as 1922 as inevitable in the interest of historic

London Alarmed

By the Associated Press.

London (Friday), March 31.—Diplomatic circles expected Prime Minister Chamberlain to announce to the House of Commons today that Britain intends to fight in case of German aggression against Poland—but not against Nazi annexation of Danzig.

These sources said Britain had made a decision of sweeping importance—to aid Poland or Rumania in resisting German expansion at their expense—with certain conditions supposedly attached to her guarantees.

Whether Britain would fight for the integrity of the Polish corridor apparently hinged upon Poland's attitude.

Reply Held Awaited

Announcement of the decision to back up Poland in case of German aggression against the rest of Polish territory also apparently waited upon a reply from Poland.

The British awaited news of Poland's attitude from Sir Howard Kennard, British Ambassador to Warsaw, who was reported to have seen the Polish foreign minister, Joseph Beck, Thursday.

Officials were silent concerning the momentous decision believed taken by the cabinet early yesterday—to offer territorial guarantees in eastern Europe where Britain heretofore has refused to make ironclad promises—but one usually reliable informant said:

"The British Cabinet now is convinced that a bold course is the best course."

Dominions Informed

[The Nazi press campaign against Poland, coupled with ominous reports of heavy German troop movements on the Polish frontier, prompted fear in official quarters of a German attack on Poland next week, while Col. Josef Beck is in London, The Post's correspondent in London reported.

[The reports of German troop movements in Silesia and Pomerania became so alarming that Britain felt immediate action was necessary, it was said.—Editor's note.]

Concern was reflected in a day of swiftly-moving diplomacy in which:

The cabinet held a long and unexpected meeting after Prime

Patterson, Aide to Hopkins, Sees 1939 As Year of Expansion

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Richard C. Patterson, jr., last night urged business concerns to employ "working, nonexecutive" directors and to follow price policies designed to expand output as a means of taking advantage of exceptional opportunities for business improvement this year.

Addressing the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association at a dinner at the Washington Hotel, he listed ten reasons why the Commerce Department expects business this year to "show considerable improvement over 1938."

Avoiding any suggestion of "appeasement," which President Roosevelt and Secretary Hopkins have found distasteful, he stressed the social responsibilities of business.

Attacks Trade Barriers

Patterson attacked the "restrictive influences of interstate trade barriers," and called on industry to take the lead in doing away with these obstacles.

Outstanding "elements of strength" which point to business improvement, he declared, are "increased national income, improved profits, absence of inventory liquidation and

Law to Give Fuehrer Supreme Control of Reichsbank, Funk Says

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 30.—Spirited criticism of financial conditions which permit a vast flow of gold to the United States marked a speech today in which Reichsbank President Walther Funk announced a new law would be promulgated in May making "the Fuehrer principle" the driving force of Germany's financial system.

Funk said the world was standing at the parting of the ways—either it must "surrender to the gold power of America or accept the new methods of young, strong, progressive nations"—meaning Italy and Germany.

"Is a new dance around the golden calf to begin?" Funk asked. "Will the world immolate itself on the altar of the American golden Moloch?"

Funk, who also is minister of economics, said the new law would give Reichsfuehrer Hitler supreme authority over the Reichsbank.

In outlining the plan in a speech before the Reichsbank central committee, Funk also expressed hope for improved trade relations with

Stinson Sues for $35,000; Charges Wife Violated Pact

As Joseph Whitla Stinson revealed in District Court yesterday that he has filed a suit asking $35,000 more from Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, "because she did not live up to our separation agreement," attorneys for the wealthy Washington woman announced they will amend their original plea for annulment of marriage between the two by adding "a third barrel to our argument."

The third barrel, they said, will be the Reno divorce obtained from Stinson by his first wife, Mrs. Harriet McFee Stinson, on March 15, 1937—just 13 days before he proposed to the woman who claims she was drugged into a marriage that never was consummated. "We will show that he was a married man all the time," Alvin L. Newmyer, one of the attorneys, declared.

The Reno divorce proceedings also will show, Newmyer announced, that Stinson, "beyond doubt," did leave his second wife on their wedding night with the assertion he "believed in things of the spirit rather than the body." This Stinson has flatly denied.

In the suit asking $35,000, Stinson claimed that he now has a right to "reopen this matter of the $230,000 trust fund" set up for him by Mrs. Crounse in May of 1937.

117 Are Injured In Subway Crash In New York

New York, March 30 (AP).—Ten persons were injured seriously and 107 suffered lesser injuries in a crash of two local trains in the rush hour today near the Madison Square Garden Bowl Station of the City Independent Subway System.

Thomas Burke, a trainmaster, said the collision occurred when the first local stalled between the Steinway avenue and Forty-sixth Street Station, in Queens, and was rammed by the following train.

Both of the four-car trains then proceeded to the Forty-sixth Street Station, where ambulances and police were waiting.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, issued a certificate of suicide. Friends said McKenzie had been despondent.

Gas Kills Woman And Child She Is About to Adopt

A General Accounting Office clerk returned home from work yesterday to find his wife and the 5-month-old baby they were to adopt dead on the kitchen floor of their second-floor apartment at 3016 Channing street northeast.

Mrs. Paul N. Brumbaugh, 45, and the baby, Donald Paul, had been dead since about 10 a. m., according to Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, who issued a certificate of accidental death. As police reconstructed the tragedy, Mrs. Brumbaugh had just finished bathing the baby, which was clad in its night clothes.

Their bodies were lying on the kitchen floor beside the gas stove on which stood a pan of water containing milk bottles. Apparently the pan had boiled over, extinguishing the flame without Mrs. Brumbaugh's knowledge.

The Clipper flew from the Maryland city to the Azores in 17 hours and 32 minutes on its first leg. It will fly from here to Marseilles, France, Saturday, thence to Southampton, England, from where it will start its return trip

Leon Henderson to Head SEC With Frank Returning to Law

Is Strong Opponent Of Monopolistic Price Controls

Leon Henderson, secretary of the Temporary National Economic Committee, will be appointed chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and SEC Commissioner Jerome Frank later will resign to enter private law practice, The Post learned yesterday.

Henderson will fill the post vacated by William O. Douglas, recently named to the Supreme Court. Frank, who has received strong behind-the-scenes backing for the chairmanship, is expected to serve under Henderson two or three months before resigning.

One of the "inner circle" New Dealers, Henderson, as chairman of the commission, undoubtedly will reflect President Roosevelt's determination that Federal securities regulations should remain substantially untouched. The SEC has long been a favorite New Deal agency.

Henderson's connection with the New Deal began in 1934, when he was appointed economic adviser to the NRA. He subsequently became consulting economist for the WPA

CAPITAL CLOSEUPS.

For sheer gall and effrontery, the case of the Nazi secret agent who told immigration officials when he landed at New York that he was on his way to visit Elliott Roosevelt in Texas certainly deserves a lifted eyebrow from our counter espionage service.

* * * *

Elliott Roosevelt
. . . amazed

After this Nazi had overstayed his visa by several months and was ripe for deportation, the immigration people wrote to young Mr. Roosevelt in Fort Worth, asking if he knew anything about the German's present location. To say that the President's son was amazed is putting it mildly.

* * * *

Elliott Roosevelt wrote to the immigration office at Ellis Island that he had met the German casually at a party in Fort Worth in 1936, and had not seen him or heard from him since, except that he recalls vaguely receiving a card from him in 1938 postmarked in Mexico City.

"—sabotage in the hangars?"

The President's son has since told friends that the German told him, when they were introduced, that he owned 50,000 acres of land in Mexico. He also admitted being an employe of the German government.

Young Roosevelt also says that it was later the vague but general impression among his friends in Texas through whom he met the German that he was in charge of Nazi propaganda and espionage in Mexico.

Now Elliott is pretty irritated by the whole incident.

* * * *

Such a piece of brazen cheek naturally stirs up memories of the feverish activities of Bernstorff and von Papen in the United States in 1916.

Could the Mexican oil seizures have been plotted and inspired in Berlin?

It is interesting and perhaps significant that Hitler's close friend, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, has been assigned to the Nazi consulate in San Francisco, and that Herbert Scholz, first secretary of the German Embassy in Washington, has just been transferred to "consular work" in Boston.

Such a bright young man for such routine work!

* * * *

Also, it was the German consulate in Chicago which performed the mumbo-jumbo on the great barter bubble, in which good American pork was to be traded for Nazi harmonicas . . . Naturally, the Nazi agent who so glibly told the immigration people that he was on his way to visit the President's son is being hunted as diligently as possible, but by now he is doubtless safely south of the Rio Grande.

"—a Justice might run"

As first stated in this column on February 10, before Bill Douglas' name was mentioned for the Supreme Court, the inner circle New Dealers now feel that the high court is the most hopeful avenue toward a genuine Roosevelt candidate in 1940. Especially if the Hopkins and Wallace balloons seem to be drifting beyond the horizon.

* * * *

So the New Dealers feel they already have two excellent prospects on the Supreme bench, in Justices Reed and Douglas. They feel that Douglas could, for example, campaign the whangdoodle out of Tom Dewey . . . And with two justices around 77 years old and another none too robust, they feel they may have a third streamlined Presidential prospect up there during 1939—maybe as Chief Justice.

SABOTAGE. You run into more and more talk of airplane sabotage in Washington official circles. So many strange things have been happening to American airplanes, both military and civilian, after they have proven themselves already in flight, that the Capital is beginning to wonder . . . The Army and Navy are not issuing any figures on aircraft crashes and casualties for 1938; they naturally regard this as information of military value . . . The only bitter consolation is that the British and Germans seem to be having even more troubles with their planes, an empty and doleful solace.

Of course, some officials laugh at the sabotage talk as pure hysteria.

The recommended scales, if approved by Andrews, will mean wage increases to 46,000 hosiery workers, employed primarily on the Eastern Seaboard.

WPA Fund Cut To 55 Million Asked in House

Woodrum Attacks Agency as He Offers $100,000,000 Measure

Subjected to angry assault from two directions, the $100,000,000 relief bill emerged from three hours' House debate yesterday with chances still strong that it will be approved without change when a vote is taken this afternoon.

Slicing $50,000,000 from President Roosevelt's recommendation, the bill was bitterly attacked by Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, on the ground that it is inadequate to care for relief needs for the remaining three months of the fiscal year. Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, on the other hand, asserted that if the WPA eliminated waste, no further appropriation would be necessary.

But the keynote speech was delivered by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, manager of the bill, who, severely criticizing WPA, spoke on behalf of the $100,000,000 grant. From the unusual applause that greeted Woodrum's speech on both sides of the aisle as well as from off-the-record remarks of many Congressmen, it appeared that the House would follow the Appropriations Committee's recommendation.

Nevertheless, a strong movement to trim the committee figure to $55,000,000 was developing among a bloc of "from 25 to 40" Southern Democrats, angered over failure of the "urban-liberal" group to vote for $250,000,000 farm parity payments. Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, is expected to offer the amendment this afternoon. Although many Republicans will be found to support the smaller sum, it appeared doubtful yesterday that the move would succeed.

Under a parliamentary situation which has infuriated proponents of $150,000,000, no roll call on that figure can be obtained. Representative Fitzpatrick (Democrat), of New York, will propose the $50,000,000 addition to the committee bill; but even the most ardent of the "urban-liberal" members conceded yesterday that they had only the slimmest chance of victory on a teller vote. They insisted, however, that if they could maneuver the House into having a roll call on the larger appropriation, they would win.

On Capitol Hill

As a reward for his long service with Gen. John J. Pershing on the Mexican border and in France during the World War, Capt. Edwin Adamson, of the quartermaster Corps, U. S. A., was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday military secretary to the general of the armies with the rank of colonel. He was immediately confirmed.

He will be able to retire at that rank upon reaching the retirement age of 64 within a few days.

The White House made public a telegram from Gen. Pershing saying:

"Dear Mr. President:

"Please accept my most sincere thanks and appreciation of your approval of the bill authorizing the promotion of Capt. Adamson to the grade of colonel and military secretary and your appointment of Adamson to that grade. I send you affectionate regards and best wishes for your continued good health."

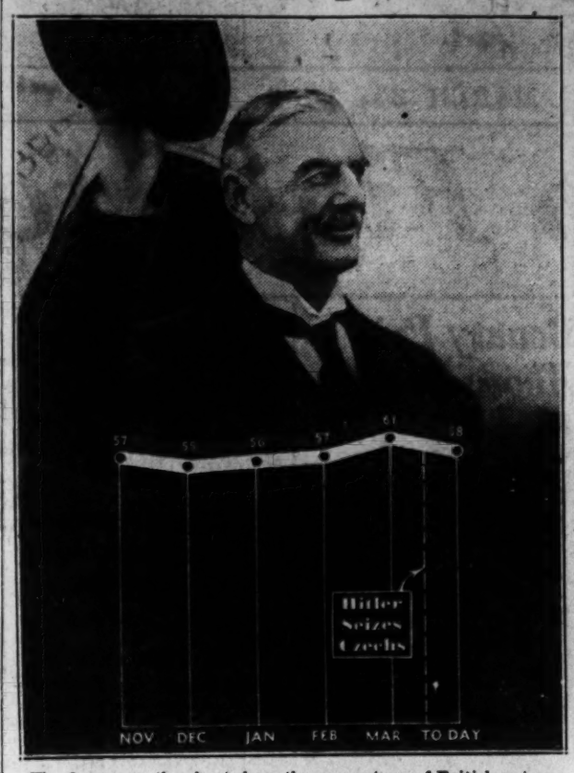
The Gallup Poll



The figures on the chart show the percentage of British voters satisfied with Neville Chamberlain as prime minister. The results are from surveys by the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute

Chamberlain Popularity Down Slightly Since Czech Coup, British Poll Finds

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 30.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's popularity with British voters has declined since Hitler's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia early this month, but the 70-year-old statesman whose foreign policy has stressed European "appeasement" is still approved by a sizable majority of his fellow countrymen.

Sounding of British sentiment by the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American institute, show that after a brief set-back following the Munich peace last September, Chamberlain's popularity climbed steadily until early March when 61 per cent of British voters said they were satisfied with him as prime minister, against 39 per cent who said they were not. Then came Hitler's swift march into Prague, which raised a flurry of criticism in England against the prime minister's policies. Today Chamberlain is approved by a slightly smaller majority—58 per cent, with 42 per cent opposed.

The six-month trend has been as follows:

"Are you satisfied with Mr. Neville Chamberlain as prime minister?"

	Yes	No
November, 1938	57%	43%
December	55	45
January, 1939	56	44
February	57	43
March	61	39
TODAY	58	42

The rise in Chamberlain's popularity during the winter months is explained to a great extent by the public's attitude toward appeasement. A recent British Institute survey found that the largest single group of voters—nearly half of the total—think the policy "will keep us out of war until we have time to rearm"—a view which the London News Chronicle describes as "cynically realistic."

This survey asked a cross-section of British voters:

"Which of these statements comes nearest to representing your views of Mr. Chamberlain's policy of appeasement?

"(1) It is a policy which will ultimately lead to enduring peace in Europe.

"(2) It will keep us out of war until we have time to rearm.

"(3) It is bringing war nearer by whetting the appetites of the dictators."

The vote was:

Lead to Enduring Peace	28%
Keep Us Out of War Until We Can Rearm	46
Bringing War Nearer	24
No Opinion	2

It is clear from the vote that the majority think the appeasement policy will either bring long-term peace or is at least a short-term expedient for safety.

RFC Asks Freer Hand in Loans To Railroads

Jones Opposes Plan To Restrict Lending To $300,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones suggested yesterday that Congress pass legislation to permit the Reconstruction Finance Corporation a freer hand in lending money to railroads.

Jones told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that the RFC's experience in rail loans had been "very satisfactory."

He said the RFC had loaned about $834,000,000 to the railroads and $475,000,000 remained unpaid.

"We expect no serious loss," he said, "on outstanding loans. Appraisement of our securities show in some cases some impairment but not enough to affect the entire situation."

In answer to a barrage of questions, Jones expressed emphatic opposition to provisions of pending transportation legislation authorizing 2 per cent RFC loans up to $300,000,000.

"I don't like the limitation of $300,000,000," Jones said, "for if you tell us to lend $300,000,000 and we don't we catch hell. And I don't see why you should make 2 per cent loans to railroads and not to the other fellow."

RFC loans generally carry considerably higher interest rates.

Jones proposed that Congress remove the present provision of the RFC act which makes its loans contingent on a statement from the Interstate Commerce Commission that a rail borrower is not in need of financial reorganization.

Swift Senate Approval Seen for Brown

BROWN

Former Senator Fred H. Brown, of New Hampshire, buddy of Vice President Garner and at one time a big league baseball player, was appointed Comptroller General yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Brown will fill the vacancy created by retirement of John Raymond McCarl on July 1, 1936. His appointment will place the General Accounting Office under Democratic control for the first time.

The President forwarded Brown's nomination to the Senate. Shortly afterward, Senator Burke (Democrat), New Hampshire, blocked an attempt to secure immediate confirmation. Senator Barkley (Kentucky), Democratic leader, asked the rule which requires reference of nominations to the standing committee be set aside as a courtesy to the former Senator.

"Should Go to Committee"

Burke insisted that "all nominations should go to committee in the regular order."

Brown, a New Dealer, was defeated for re-election last fall by Charles W. Tobey, Republican. Burly and red faced, he chews tobacco and nurses a hearty dislike for public utilities—acquired, he says, during a seven-year period of service on his State's public service commission.

Despite Burke's objection to immediate confirmation, it was agreed that he would be confirmed without trouble.

Reports of Garner's Support

During his service in the Senate, Brown and Garner, both stanch baseball fans, frequently attended home games played by the Washington Senators. There were reports that Garner has sponsored him for the Comptroller General vacancy.

The Comptroller General's Office is looked upon as a highly desirable plum. It pays $10,000 a year. Appointments are for a 15-year period. Brown will enjoy the same independence as his predecessor, since Congress refused to include in the recently enacted Government reorganization bill Administration recommendations for dismantling the General Accounting Office and substituting an "Auditor General" for the Comptroller General.

Brown, who is 59, will be the second Comptroller General in the country's history. McCarl, formerly secretary to Senator Norris, Nebraska Independent, was appointed in 1921, after Congress had created the General Accounting Office to keep watch over Government expenditures.

2 Plead Guilty In Montgomery Numbers Case

Conviction Follows Arrest by 10 Days; Sentence Due Today

Ten days after they were arrested in the opening raid of Montgomery County's drive against gamblers, Joseph Hilleary, 28, of 2 Fowler's avenue northwest, and Randolph Brice, 25, colored, of Bethesda, were convicted yesterday of operating a numbers game.

Hilleary and Brice changed their plea to guilty as State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson, jr., closed his case before Circuit Judges Stedman Prescott, Charles W. Woodward and Arthur D. Willard, in the Montgomery County Courthouse in Rockville. They were held for sentence today.

Cora Kenney, colored, 55, of Bethesda, arrested with Hilleary and Brice, pleaded guilty before the trial opened, and testified for the government. As State's witnesses, she was immune from sentence.

The change of plea came after Montgomery police had told how they sent their "calling cards" to the suspects for days before the arrest.

Detective Sergt. Vollten, head of the Montgomery police identification bureau, testified that he had made numbers plays with Frank Nelson, colored, who in turn took the slips to Cora Kenney's house, where they were collected by Hilleary.

Vollten said each of 21 slips was initialed, and that through investigation these initials had spelled out the last names of the four police officers who led the raid, Vollten, Chas. M. Orme, Montgomery County's new police chief; Sergt. Leroy Rodgers, in charge of the Bethesda police station, and Deputy Sheriff John Leahy.

Officials hailed the speedy trial, and declared this first major offensive against gamblers had already started an exodus of numbers operators from the county.

Torrio Paid Heavy Graft, U. S. Charges

$20,000 Monthly Went For Racket Protection, Tax Jury Is Told

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 30.—Payments of $20,000 or more a month for protection of big-time dealings in illicit liquor were attributed to Johnny Torrio by a Government prosecutor today at the trial for income tax evasion of the one-time Chicago rackets boss.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Seymour Klein made the accusations and pictured Torrio as the kingpin of the racket who would stay in the background until "important things were happening." He expressed belief Torrio's operations were far greater than the Government had been able to establish.

The charges brought a denial from Torrio's chief counsel, Max Steuer, who contended in his opening statement the Government could not prove "by truthful evidence" that Torrio earned a dollar from illicit liquor after 1925, the year he served nine months for violating the prohibition laws. Furthermore, Steuer charged, the Government "is trying to convict him merely because he is John Torrio."

The indictment against the former boss of Al Capone—who was sent to prison on his conviction of similar charges—alleges Torrio evaded payment of $86,000 in taxes in the years 1933-34-35. Four codefendants were accused of aiding.

Among the first witnesses was Saul C. Steinthal, who testified he was dismissed from the Internal Revenue Service and given a jail term after pleading guilty to accepting "gratuities."

It was he, Stienthal said, who prepared Torrio's 1933 return. He explained he put in enough "miscellaneous income" to make a $1,000 tax necessary, because Torrio insisted he "must pay something," and suggested "about $1,000" as the proper amount.

Tornadoes Hit South After Flood Kills 12

7 Hurt by Twisters; Rising Waters Delay President's Train

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, March 30.—Tornadoes struck widely scattered sections of the South today in the wake of slashing rains that turned streams into torrents of menace to life and property.

At least 12 were dead in a swollen river near Vicksburg, Miss., where nine automobiles plunged through a washed-out bridge in the night in single file procession. Six were hurt there.

The engineer and fireman of a Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railroad passenger train drowned tonight when the locomotive struck a stretch of landslide damaged track and plunged into the Michigamme River, near Three Lakes, Mich. No passengers were hurt.

At Brewton, Ala., a store building and five dwellings were destroyed and two women were injured by a tornado. Three houses were destroyed and two persons hurt at Langdale, Ala. Tops of homes were strewn over a mile-wide area by a twister that struck Arlington, Ga. Three colored persons were injured.

The train carrying President Roosevelt to Warm Springs, Ga., was forced to slow up several times because of high water last night as it crossed central Georgia. Rain caused postponement of the Augusta National Golf Tournament.

Precipitation ranging from 2.01 inches in Atlanta to 6.07 inches at Lagrange, Ga., caused threatening rise in the Chattahoochee River.

Heavy rains were forecast for New England accompanied by probable gales along the coast. Storm warnings were hoisted from Delaware Breakwater to Eastport, Me.

Some sections of New England were sprinkled by light snow last night, and temperatures ranged from 20 degrees in northern Vermont to the freezing point in southern areas.

Veto Threat Kills Pay Tax Tariff Rider

Tax

to reciprocal taxation of incomes of Federal and State employes rose yesterday in a move by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to provide in the same measure for reciprocal taxation of interest on Federal, State and local security issues.

The Supreme Court last Monday sustained the l[illegible]e of reciprocal Federal-State salary taxes but failed to rule on constitu[illegible]onality of taxing income on Government and local bonds.

Declared Legal

Clark told the committee the taxes are legal under the sixteenth amendment and proposed to offer a rider to the salary bill next Monday "to stop this flight of private capital to Federal and State tax-exempts."

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman of a special tax committee, agreed with Clark but advised enactment of the bond tax provisions in a second measure so as not to slow passage of the salary bill.

To guard against retroactive taxation of Federal employes' pay, under Monday's Supreme Court ruling, Brown was authorized by the committee to prepare an amendment immunizing Federal official salaries from taxation for past years. The bill already protects State employes from retroactive Federal taxation. Brown said early action is imperative to stop "unjust" back taxes.

Hull Fought Changes

With the vegetable oils and fats riders disposed of, the committee made arrangements to call up the bill adding an estimated $16,000,000 to Federal revenue from State salary taxation in the Senate next Monday. Clark said he will attempt at the same time to add the Federal-State bond tax amendment to the bill, unless he receives definite assurances that the Ways and Means Committee will bring out a separate measure.

The President's threat to veto the salary measure, "however meritorious," of the Connally and Bailey tax increases on imported oils are included, followed a vigorous stand against their inclusion by Hull at recent committee hearings.

President Backs Hull

Backing Hull's argument, the President wrote Harrison the proposals "run directly counter to the provisions of the reciprocal trade agreements already in force with such important countries as the United Kingdom, Canada, the Netherlands and Brazil."

"The resulting rates could be described by no other word than 'embargoes,'" said the President. "If one industry is thus to receive an embargo, all will demand it. Then other nations will inevitably impose embargoes on our exports."

Connally recently modified his proposals so they would not take effect during the life of existing trade agreements but would apply to future agreements and modifications of old ones.

"Let no one be lulled into thinking that this modification of the amendments would remove the basic conflict between them and the trade agreements program," said the President. "All this modification means is that we would not be convicted of violating outright four of our international agreements; we would still inevitably lose a substantial part of the benefits of these important agreements and would run the grave risk of losing all of them."

Mr. Roosevelt said "private interests" seeking to benefit from the amendments ignore the fact that rates as they now stand have an ad valorem equivalent of 89 per cent on imported palm oil, 36 per cent on edible palm kernel oil, 65 per cent on inedible palm kernel oil, and the rider proposals would increase these rates to 149 per cent, 151 per cent and 108 per cent respectively.

Evils Stressed

If passed, he said they would expose a huge volume of trade to the danger of "retaliatory" action, would hamper efforts to obtain additional trade concessions, and would jeopardize agreements providing more than a quarter billion of farm export concessions, and millions of factory exports.

The committee vote on the Connally vegetable oil, followed reading of the President's letter by Harrison. Senators George, Bailey, Johnson, of Colorado, LaFollette and Capper joined Connally. Voting "No" were King, Walsh, Barkley, Clark, Brown, Herring, Radcliffe, Byrd, Gerry, Guffey, Townsend, Lodge and Harrison.

Supporting Bailey's companion imported fish and animal oil tax increase were George, Connally, Johnson, LaFollette, Capper, Davis and Bailey. On this amendment King, Walsh, Barkley, Clark, Gerry Guffey, Brown, Herring, Radcliffe, Townsend, Lodge and Harrison voted "No."

Text of Roosevelt Tariff Protest Letter

The text of President Roosevelt's letter to Senator Harrison opposing the increased tariffs on imported vegetable oils and fats follows:

My Dear Senator Harrison:

I feel impelled to write to you in regard to certain amendments now under consideration before your committee which would amend H. R. 3790, a bill which deals with the important and entirely separate subject of reciprocal taxation of incomes of Federal and State employes. These amendments would raise to new heights the taxes—in effect tariffs—on many imported fats and oils. I am addressing this letter to you because the amendments have been referred to the committee of which you are the chairman.

I, of course, know that the Senators who introduced these amendments acted in good faith. But there should be no illusion about the vital importance of the issue the amendments present. We are not dealing here with bona-fide excise taxes for revenue purposes, but with what in purpose and effect are tariffs of the embargo variety. The amendments run directly counter to the provisions of reciprocal trade agreements already in force with such important countries as the United Kingdom, Canada, the Netherlands and Brazil. If enacted, they would destroy or at the very least seriously impair these agreements under which we have obtained concessions benefiting more than a quarter of a billion dollars worth of American exports of agricultural products alone and they would hamper our efforts to conclude additional trade agreements in the interest of American agriculture and industry. The issue is clear. It is whether to sustain our present policy or to return now, or during the pending of the trade agreements act, to the embargo tariff policy exemplified by the disastrous Hawley-Smoot tariff act.

The private interests who seek to benefit from the amendments apparently ignore the fact that on the basis of 1938 import values the rates as they now stand have an ad valorem equivalent of 89 per cent in the case of palm oil, 96 per cent on edible palm kernel oil, and 65 per cent on inedible palm kernel oil. Under the proposed amendments these ad valorem equivalents would be increased to 149 per cent, 151 per cent, and 108 per cent, respectively. In the place of present rates on wool grease, ranging from 43 per cent to 93 per cent, the proposals would substitute rates of from 60 per cent to 146 per cent. By and large these proposals call for 50 per cent increases over the already high rates. The resulting rates could be described by no other word than "embargoes." If one industry is thus to receive an embargo, all will demand it. Then nations will inevitably impose embargoes on our exports.

At first, the proposals called for these tax increases immediately, which would have meant outright violations of our trade agreements with the United Kingdom, Canada, the Netherlands and Brazil. Now it is suggested that the effect of the conflicting tax increases shall be postponed until the four agreements mentioned, which are of such great value to American agriculture and industry, can be modified and terminated at the earliest possible moment under the terms of those agreements. Let no one be lulled into thinking that this modification of the amendments would remove the basic conflict between them and the trade agreements program. The real issue would remain exactly the same. All this modification means is that we would not be convicted of violating outright four of our international agreements; we would still inevitably lose a substantial part of the benefits of these important agreements and would run the grave risk of losing all of them.

Such tariff or tax increases, when proposed, obviously should be treated as amendments of existing tariff legislation and should receive the kind of consideration that would be given to specific tariff legislation. This would include study of the proposals on their own merits by experts of the Tariff Commission and other agencies of the Government and by the appropriate committee of the Congress, as elements in the general tariff structure and in relation to the country's commercial policy as a whole.

The inclusion of tariff revisions as parts of or as riders on other legislation creates a difficult situation for the Executive. It imposes upon the President the necessity of accepting tariff rate revisions which he may consider contrary to the public interest in order to preserve the main legislation. His only alternative is to veto the whole act and thereby delay and perhaps endanger the desirable and major portions of the act. In this case the adoption of the amendments would make it my clear duty to veto H. R. 3790 however meritorious the bill may be.

Let me repeat, the trade agreements program is an essential part of our general program for economic recovery in this country. It is also, particularly at this critical stage of world affairs, a vital part of our foreign policy. Attacks on the trade agreements program such as that represented by this new drive for embargo tariffs on fats and oils are, therefore, attacks on our efforts to attain full prosperity at home and to promote economic disarmament and peaceful relations throughout the world. Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

These amendments would seriously undermine a program which already has proven of great benefit to American agriculture, notwithstanding the depressed state of our foreign market. Our exports of farm products to trade agreement countries increased by 55 percent in the fiscal year 1937-38 over 1935-36. Our exports of farm products to non-trade-agreement countries increased by only 3 per cent over the same period. This comparison, striking as it is, does not take into account the agricultural benefits obtained recently in the agreement with the United Kingdom or in the new agreement with Canada. In 1936, the United Kingdom alone bought one-third of the agricultural products we sold abroad. Concessions covering 92 per cent of those purchases were obtained in the agreement, effective January 1 of this year. In other words, we have obtained in one single trade agreement improved or more stable markets for nearly a third of our total agricultural exports, including such key products as wheat, cotton, corn, lard and tobacco.

Our trade agreements with 19 foreign countries have done more for American agriculture than to improve and stabilize foreign markets for many of our agricultural products. They have increased purchasing power in the domestic market for our farm crops. When, for example, our exports of automobiles to Brazil under a trade agreement concession increase, as they have done, by $4,500,000,000, there is more purchasing power available for our workers to buy meat, butter, milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Our total exports to 17 agreement countries in the two-year period 1937-1938, were greater in value by 61.2 per cent than the average for the pre-agreement period, 1934-1935, while exports to all other countries increased by an average of only 37.9.

I should like every farmer, every producer of surpluses in this country, every one in all walks of life, to know how great the cost would be if these amendments should be adopted. I should like them to know that the enactment of these amendments would seriously jeopardize trade agreements by means of which concessions have been obtained on more than a quarter of a billion dollars worth of our agricultural exports and on several hundreds of millions of dollars worth of our exports of factory and other products. I should like them to know that these amendments, if passed, would sooner or later expose this huge volume of trade to the danger of retaliatory trade restrictions in the countries adversely affected. I should like them to know that these amendments would hamper our efforts to obtain additional benefits for our agricultural and industrial producers. And I should like them to know that the power for leadership of this country in the great task of rebuilding international trade under the principles of equality and mutual profit, without which full and stable economic recovery in this country and in other countries cannot be realized, would be virtually destroyed.

Price Goods to Expand Sales, Commerce Aide Tells Business

Business

burdensome stocks in distribution channels and increased employment."

Other factors "which lead me to take an optimistic view of the business outlook," he said, are:

The fact that cyclical business changes, such as the recovery movement beginning last summer, usually do not run their course in a few months; partial concealment of some favorable factors by the troubled international situation; a bright outlook for the construction industry; the power output trend, recent improvement in railroad operating results, and "constructive clarification" of the public utility problem; possibility that improved financial conditions of industries will stimulate capital expenditures, and advances in consumer purchases and durable products and rise in consumer income with no corresponding advance in the cost of living.

Jones Appeals for Credit

Other important developments in the business situation were:

Chairman Jesse H. Jones appealed to the Nation's 15,000 banks to "see to it that no business enterprise of merit, regardless of size, is unnecessarily restricted in its operations by lack of credit that can be secured so as reasonably to assure repayment."

Government economists, pointing out that business had been on a virtual "plateau" for three or four months, prophesied a pick-up from the present level. The expansion in armaments, they said, is having some stimulating effect.

Co-operation Praised

The dinner meeting addressed by Patterson was part of a two-day conference here between representatives of the electrical manufacturing industry and Commerce Department officials.

Patterson pointed to the plan for purchase of surplus food by relief workers with stamps as a "conspicuous example of how a practical plan of action grows out of a spirit of co-operation between Government and business."

The Commerce Department, he said, played an important role in this arrangement, which was worked out with retail trade associations.

A "Business Embassy"

The Commerce Department, he said, wants to become the "Business Embassy" in Washington. A number of other industrial groups, such as the automobile manufacturing and lumber industries, are working with the department through advisory committees, he declared, "and we intend to extend this type of direct co-operation."

With business still sub-normal and unemployment large, he declared, "we must continue to move toward a goal of increased national income"—which the Administration has set at $80,000,000,000 a year.

Installation of nonexecutive directors on boards of corporations, Patterson declared, is one of the many things business can do without Government sponsorship.

He hinted, however, at much more drastic and far-reaching proposals.

Opposes Public Directors

"I am opposed," he explained, "to any plan whereby public directors would be appointed to company boards by Government."

The nonexecutive director, Patterson declared, should devote his full time to serving as director of a limited number of noncompeting companies.

Of considerable significance was his remark that co-operative efforts on the part of business, if "guided by a concept of public service," would make a definite contribution to economic welfare—"especially as they make available to the smaller units of industry the results of a board approach to common problems."

Dr. Willard L. Thorp, special economic adviser to Hopkins, told the audience that the President's monopoly committee was studying the causes and effects of a rapidly shifting economic order with a view to "pointing the way to correctives by both business and Government."

Carl L. Peirce, jr., president of the association, presided at the dinner. In the absence of Hopkins, who accompanied President Roosevelt on his trip south, Patterson greeted association members at the opening session of the conference yesterday morning.

Redding, Calif., March 30 (INS).—A sharp earthquake late today rocked the area around Mount Lassen, America's only active volcano.

equivocally that today's list of gladsome events would take place without fail.

The vanguard of what is expected to be half a million visitors by Easter Monday, who had already arrived in the capital for the beginning of the festival, began to suspect all this about 4 o'clock, when the sun broke through yesterday's rain.

And the cherry blossoms, the pansies, forsythia, magnolias and budding trees that compete to make the environs of the Tidal Basin a place of beauty in either rain or sun, seemed to have benefited by the moisture which yesterday and Wednesday made today's program uncertain.

Scene Is Beautiful

Even while yesterday's light rain fell, the scene of today's jubilant welcome to spring was overwhelming in its beauty. The throne, still vacant of flowers, which today will be the center of pomp and panoply at the polo grounds south of the basin, had for its exact background the Washington Monument. And the clear horizon, fringed with some of the Capital's noblest buildings, the line of green-budding trees that made a foreground for the cherry trees themselves, and the sweep of the Potomac at the rear of the grandstand erected for distinguished visitors, gave a foretaste of today's splendor.

Arrangements to care for traffic today are not least among the carefully planned details of Washington's most characteristic festivity.

Music and Dancing

Music and dancing will greet the sun at 7 a. m. at the foot of Seventeenth street, about 600 feet from the boathouse. The Evelyn Davis dancers will perform Potomac Valley folk dances, and the U. S. Marine Band Orchestra will play.

Other events will precede the coronation of the queen in the afternoon, and special programs will follow.

Between 1:45 and 2 in the afternoon the United States Marine Band will play spring music—such things as "In Spring," by Goldmark, and "Spring Song," by Mendelssohn.

From 2 p. m. until 2:45 there will be a program of spring dances by children from the playgrounds and settlement houses, assisted by Girl Scouts of Chevy Chase Troop 122. Girls from the Palisades and McMillan playgrounds will give a dance recital called "Spring Fancy." Other children will perform folk dances. Miss Maude Parker, Miss Anne Mitchell and Miss Virginia Griffith prepared the program.

At 4:30 p. m. appearance of Cavalry from Fort Myer, escorting the Crown Princess of the Festival, shortly to be made Queen by official action of Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, will herald the most colorful spectacle of the day.

Miss Peggy Twonsend, the Queen-elect, will be escorted in a large Cadillac car by Lieut. L. Fletcher Cole, of F Troop, Third United States Cavalry, who will be her aide during the afternoon, and by Senator Barkley.

Troop F, Third Cavalry, has been assigned by Col. George A. Patton, jr., commanding officer of Fort Myer, to be the queen's personal escort. The mounted regimental band and the buglers of the Third Cavalry will provide a fanfare.

Following coronation of the queen, the cavalrymen will give an exhibition that will include a mounted musical chair competition by members of the machine gun troop, Tenth Cavalry, a rescue race between members of the Third Cavalry, a hunt team competition, a musical drill by Troop E, Third Cavalry, and retreat by all Third Cavalry organizations and a detachment from the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

At the close of these events the queen will award prizes donated by the committee.

Between 7:30 and 8 there will be a concert by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, and at 8 o'clock an hour's fireworks display at the Tidal Basin near the foot of Seventeenth street. The fireworks display, according to C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman, will be chiefly aerial, except for two set pieces—"The Cherry Blossom Tree" and an elaborate "Garden of Allah."

Traffic Plans Announced

Traffic plans have been announced by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks. Two-way traffic will be permitted on Fifteenth street to the north of the propagating garden of the Department of Agriculture, and on Bacon drive, Twenty-third street, Underpass road, Overpass road, River Drive, from the Ericsson Memorial to the north end of polo field, and from railroad bridge to inlet bridge, and outlet bridge to highway bridge; and on Constitution avenue from River road to the Capitol.

Traffic will move one way on Fifteenth street north from Tidal Basin road to road north of the propagating garden; on Seventeenth street, north from John Paul Jones statue to Constitution avenue; on French drive, from Lincoln Memorial to cinder road to John Paul Jones statue, eastbound, and clockwise on Tidal Basin roadway.

Traffic may join the Cherry Blossom Parade from Constitution avenue south on Riverside drive and south on Twenty-third street, Bacon drive, Fifteenth and Fourteenth streets. Automobiles will cut in from Fourteenth street west on Madison and Jefferson drives, and across outlet bridge, and leave the parade east on Maine avenue and north on Fifteenth, Seventeenth, River drive and Underpass road.

Cherry Festival Program

7-7:30—Sunrise Service Ceremony. The Marine Band will play and the Evelyn Davis dancers will render folk dances that are familiar to the Potomac Valley. This will be at the Basin at the foot of Seventeenth street.

1:45-2—The United States Marine Band will play spring songs.

2-2:45—Children from the playground department of the public schools and from settlements, together with Girl Scouts, will give a program of Cherry Blossom dances, also at the foot of Seventeenth street at the Basin.

4:30-5:30—A military pageant and exhibition by cavalry from Fort Myers and coronation of Miss Peggy Townsend as Cherry Blossom Queen. This will be in a special enclosure at the polo grounds on the margin of the Tidal Basin near Fourteenth street.

7:30-8—Concert by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, at the foot of Seventeenth street, near the boathouse.

8-9:00—Display of fireworks at Tidal Basin, foot of Seventeenth street.

FBI Hunts Ring In Library of Congress Thefts

The Department of Justice, in co-operation with the Library of Congress, is seeking to uncover a ring which sells art prints clipped out of library books, it was learned yesterday.

Apparently the books mutilated have been those of the Library of Congress exclusively, Dr. George F. Bowerman, District public librarian, asserting that none of the art items in his collections has been reported stripped.

What has happened, according to information, is that a vandal syndicate has systematically removed a large number of original prints from the books in which they were bound and sold them through "fences."

18 Privates Named To District Police

The commissioners yesterday approved the appointment of 18 police privates. They are Chester F. Bernard, Paul H. Bixler, Lawrence E. Buscher, Oscar J. Cain, John J. Coughlin, Frank J. Beauty Put Above Brains, Ellender Told director, alleged they had been lowered in grade or dropped from the service by dissolution of their positions.

This brought the comment from Ellender that he had heard that some unwanted personnel were removed by the device of dissolving their jobs. The testimony of SSB witnesses was to the general effect that the officials were bringing in their own crowd. These cases will be reopened at 2 p. m. today.

They had the tinge of bitterness lacking in the case of Miss Lonergan, who accepted matters philosophically, and Miss Stanley, a pretty girl, who had little to say.

Miss Lonergan has worked as a stenographer-secretary in the Justice Department since July, 1934, but her career in the service has carried her to Chicago, Peoria and other cities on Government assignment. She had worked in Internal Revenue and Commerce and now, 21 years later, "the newcomers get the better assignments." She spoke very quietly, resigned-like:

"It seems that it's not what you know but who you know that counts. It's who goes to the pump for you."

But Ellender kept boring in on how Miss Stanley was appointed. Before him were Howard P. Locke, a Tax Division attorney who sometimes does Justice Department personnel work, a tall man with a serious face, and John Hill, an appointment clerk, a young fellow of stout build and a hair-trigger smile.

Ellender read lengthily from civil service rules, carried them to Hill and Locke and the three huddled over them as over a football. Ellender excused himself for five minutes, saying that upon his return he hoped the two experts could say what status Miss Stanley had in the department.

On his return he was told that the rules allow each Assistant Attorney General to name one private secretary or a confidential clerk without regard to the merit system. But Ellender contended that Miss Stanley's present duties did not fall within this category. Her duties, he insisted, was of a routine nature and performed for two attorneys. He said that in this case the rule had been twisted.

And Miss Lonergan said quietly she was working for only one attorney and easily could do the work now being performed by Miss Stanley in addition to her regular duties.

Questioning Miss Stanley, Ellender brought out that she was appointed through efforts of her uncle two years ago and that the job, a tax case, that was her first assignment, was finished. She was continued in the department as one of the "younger and prettier girls" who, Miss Lonergan said, were favored above older employes.

Miss Lonergan defended her competence with the remark that it is "who you know that counts," and said she had been a stenographer 25 years and knew shorthand backward. Asked how many who came along after her into the service seemed to get along better, she said, "Most everybody."

Charles Rader, the first witness in SSSB cases, was one of the employes Ellender referred to as having lost a job by dissolution of a position. He later was rehired temporarily at $1,620, but has been given no assurance of permanent position, he said. He contended that others were being hired while he, with veteran's preference, was left out. He contended further that many who were let out along with him got back, principally through reassignments.

George E. Luban said he had been a CAF-11 in the SSB and was given his choice of accepting a CAF-10 "or else." Almost immediately, he said, they brought in from various parts of the country several newcomers and made them CAF-12's.

Miss Gladys Jergeson, a grade 5 in the SSB, was asked by Ellender to explain her rise from a grade 3. She said it was possibly because she "grew up with the work." She denied that any influence was brought on her behalf. SSB personnel men said Miss Jergeson's rise was "in an orderly manner."

Full City Powers Proposed For Capital by Griffenhagen

District

would thereafter elect councilmen for two-year terms. Proportional representation methods of election are then set forth.

All powers of the municipal corporation are to be vested in the city council, but the council is specifically barred from interfering with the administration of the District government by the administrator or city manager.

The District administrator and department heads are authorized to attend council meetings but are barred from voting. Standing committees on the council are prohibited.

While barred from exercising any administrative control of the government except by enactment of municipal ordinances, the council is authorized to investigate the financial transactions and operations of any department and the conduct or official acts of any employe.

Ordinances and resolutions may not be enacted by the council until after they have been read at council meetings on two separate days unless this safeguard is dispensed with by a vote of five members.

Votes on ordinances and resolutions must be preceded by reports of the director of law as to validity and the administrator as to need, but this requirement may be waived by majority vote provided the administrator is furnished a copy of the proposed ordinance prior to its first reading.

The city council is empowered to appoint the District administrator, who does not need to be a local resident. His appointment would be without term and his salary $15,000 a year.

Two classes of boards and committees are provided. Permanent boards must be appointed by the council for six-year overlapping terms, while temporary committees or boards may be named by the District administrator or department directors. All must be bona fide District residents. Permanent board members would be compensated for actual time spent in performance of their duties, while members of temporary committees would work without pay, but would be reimbursed for expenses incurred.

Boards, such as the Board of Education and the Board of Libraries, are given broad advisory powers, but are denied administraive control of any department. Rules promulgated by a director of any department provided with a board, such as the schools and library, shall not become effective until approved by the board.

The proposed legislation writes into the charter the Griffenhagen recommendation that incumbent department heads, with a few exceptions, be continued as directors of the 17 new departments.

Thus the auditor would become director of the finance division, the corporation counsel would be director law, the superintendent of schools director of education, the librarian director of libraries, the superintendent of police director of police, the chief engineer of the fire department director of that department, the superintendent of insurance director of the new insurance department, the health officer director of the health department.

The director of welfare would retain the job and title, and the recorder of deeds would become director of the department of title records.

The present secretary of the Public Utilities Commission is designated director or administrative head of the department of public utilities. The commission, however, retains the power to enact regulations.

Polish Parties Unite Against Threat of Coup

Warsaw to Take 'Vigilant Stand' to Avert Surprise Move

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, March 30.—Opposition political leaders today gave the Polish government assurances which reliable sources said were a pledge of co-operation against any German attempt to "trample on Polish rights."

The press was instructed to inform its readers that contrary to "widespread rumors," Poland had received "no German demands having the character of an ultimatum, nor has any German pressure been exercised."

The press instructions said further that "in view of the fact German circles may be inclined to apply the same methods of surprise to Poland that have been applied to other countries, it is quite natural that the Polish government must take a vigilant stand."

Call on President

Two council members of the Peasant Party, Wladyslaw Witek and Wyladyslaw Krzeptowski, called on President Moscicki to promise their support. He also received eight university professors who are close to the center opposition group. They advocated a strong stand toward Germany.

It was reported 20 Ukrainians had been arrested at Lwow, in southeast Poland, and other Galician towns charged with fomenting unrest among Poland's Ukrainian minority.

Government sources have charged that independence movements among the 3,200,000 Ukrainians in Poland were supported by Nazi agents.

It was understood Foreign Minister Beck would leave for London Sunday afternoon and arrive there Monday for important conferences with British leaders. He probably will be asleep when his train passes through Berlin.

Omens See Russians

Steps to better relations with Soviet Russia and Lithuania, Poland's eastern and northern neighbors, were taken today. Warsaw officials conferred with a Soviet delegation negotiating for the purchase of machinery, textiles and coal.

In Berlin, Polish Ambassador Lipski, conferred the Grand Ribbon of Polonia Restitua on Lithuanian Minister Skirpa, the first time a Lithuanian has been so honored by Poland.

Throughout Poland there were numerous manifestations of loyalty to the government.

At Chojnice, in the Polish Corridor, which Poland fears Germany may seize, a grammar school teacher took her pupils to the German frontier.

"There is the border and we all have to keep it there," she said as the children sang the Polish national anthem.

Franco Jails 100,000 in 2 Days, Bringing Total to 600,000; Death for Many Crimes

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 30.—Nationalist authorities imposed stern measures today to crush any lingering republican opposition to the civil war victors.

A technical state of war (in effect, martial law) was decreed in Madrid for a transitory period, and military courts were given jurisdiction over all crimes committed during the 32-month conflict.

Police began rounding up persons listed in a huge card index compiled by "the fifth column"—nationalist agents and sympathizers—throughout the war.

More than 100,000 prisoners have been taken during the last two days, swelling the nationalists' total number of captives to 600,000. They included all members of the republican defense council except Gen. Jose Miaja.

Gen. Miaja escaped by flying to Algeria. His defense minister, Gen. Segismundo Casado, arrested in Valencia, and his foreign minister, Julian Besteiro, were taken to Burgos.

Madrilenos were warned that failure to surrender firearms, explosives and incendiary and poisonous material within 24 hours would mean summary court martial and possibly death.

The advocate general ordered every civilian having knowledge of crimes committed "during or after the Red (republican) regime" to report immediately to military tribunals on pain of punishment provided by the state of war edict.

Gen. Espinosa de los Monteros told Madrid that Generalissimo Franco's forces brought "peace, order, pardon and affection" and persons rigorously observing the terms of the proclamation had no reason to be frightened.

Punishable by Death

He gave a list of offenses which he said would be punished by death:

Possession of unauthorized radio transmitters or receivers and receipt of news adverse to the Nationalist cause.

Firing from a house; the porter or occupants of the floor from which shots are fired will be held responsible unless proved innocent.

Robbing, sacking and pillaging.

Sabotage of mails, telegraphs, telephones, railways, street cars, subways, factories, and electricity, water service and industrial installations.

Those charged with the following crimes are to be tried by military courts:

Insulting the armed forces, spreading reports or subversive propaganda against the Nationalists, publishing, possessing or distributing tendentious propaganda, interrupting the normal functioning of labor through strikes or otherwise, false accusations and meeting without authorization in groups of more than three persons.

Japan Declares Western Loans To Chiang Void

Chinese Newspapers She Controls Center Attack on Britain

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, March 30.—The Japanese-dominated Peiping and Nanking governments aimed two blows today at foreign influence in China, apparently after setting the stage by a campaign in Chinese newspapers published in Japanese-occupied cities.

A joint meeting of ministers of the puppet regimes at Nanking decided to repudiate all loans or credits granted by foreign powers to the Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, and approved a statement "denouncing foreign powers which are giving assistance to the Chiang Kai-shek regime."

The two governments, which Japan recognizes as heirs to governmental authority in northern and central China, declared jointly they would refuse to respect the vested rights or interests of powers assisting Chiang.

(The United States last December made credits of $25,000,000 available to the Chinese government and Britain backed a $25,000,000 loan to support China's currency two weeks ago.)

Translations from the Japanese-controlled press in Shanghai, Nanking and Hangchow in the past ten days show similarity in attacks on occidental nations in editorials, language and slogans, hinting at common inspiration.

All the editorials emphasize Japan's friendly motives toward China and repeatedly demand a "new order in Asia"—which is Japan's current slogan.

The United States, France and Soviet Russia are mentioned but almost all single out Britain. They charge her with attempts to enslave China's millions, nefarious exploitation schemes, trying to make China "another India" and attempting to dismember China through the credits to Chiang.

Daladier Reported Urging Lebrun to Accept Another Term

Parliament Leaders Want to Preserve Political Balance in Tense International Situation; Election Set for April 3

By the Associated Press.

Paris, (Friday), March 31.—France, working with Britain to stop Adolf Hitler in eastern Europe, early today initialed a commercial accord with Rumania and was reported to have invited Foreign Minister Beck, of Poland, to Paris after his London talks next week.

The commercial accord, initialed at the foreign office by leaders of the French and Rumanian trade delegations, doubled French purchases of Rumanian oil and slashed 60 per cent off French import duties on Rumanian agricultural products.

French oil purchases from Rumania for the coming year will total nearly $78,000,000, compared to $39,000,000 last year.

The accord is to be formally signed later today and will go into operation tomorrow.

The French-Rumanian trade accord was considered here as a check against trade expansion in Rumania by Germany, which gained major concessions through a five-year commercial accord with the Bucharest government last Wednesday.

Sources close to the foreign office said Beck had been invited to Paris immediately after his trip to London and had accepted. He is scheduled to reach London Monday.

Meanwhile Premier Daladier, supported by leaders of both chambers of the French Parliament, strove to achieve internal political stability.

The premier, with Jules Jeanneney and Edouard Herriot, presidents respectively of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, was reported by informed sources to be trying to induce President Lebrun to accept another term. Election of a new president of France is scheduled for April 5.

The chamber censured Germany for "injustice and violence" in the Nazi absorption of Bohemia-Moravai, the Czech portion of dissolved Czecho-Slovakia.

A unanimously adopted resolution expressed the chamber's "faithful sympathy" for the people of Bohemia and Moravia and declared:

"The people of Bohemia and Moravia will not perish. Injustice and violence will not last."

Herriot expressed approval of the resolution's sentiments which, he said, conveyed "the thoughts of the entire French people." He declared it unanimously adopted without a formal vote.

4 Held in Slaying Of Man in Freight Car

Wilmington, Del., March 30 (AP).—Four colored men were held without bail for court today on charges of killing Joseph Petko, of Hoboken, N. J., in a freight car. The four pleaded guilty to robbing Petko aboard a Baltimore & Ohio freight, but they denied they killed him and hurled his body from the train.

Briton Who Claims Hitler as Uncle In U. S. to Lecture

New York, March 30 (AP).—William Patrick Hitler, 28, a British subject who claims Chancellor Adolf Hitler as his uncle, arrived today to lecture on conditions in Germany, where he worked for six years with the "none too cordial" permission, he said, of the Fuehrer.

Hitler was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Alois Hitler.

"My father," he said, "was the half-brother of Adolf Hitler. My mother, the former Drigid Elizabeth Dowling, met Alois Hitler in 1909 in Dublin, where he was studying physics." She was deserted.

We imported this idea to create this different Bonded Whiskey for you
In Scotland they've been doing it for centuries... In Canada, too, with their proudest brands of whiskey. And in the vineyard country of France... in ripening their royally fine brandies.
But in America... never!
Never, that is... until Signet appeared.
Here's the very first bottled-in-bond whiskey of its type... aged in the way our own distilleries in Scotland and Canada age whiskey.
That's the secret of Signet's amazingly light body. Its delicate flavor. Its ripeness without "woodiness." And its subtle bouquet that rates the appreciative "ah-hh-hh" of any connoisseur.
Signet is Aged in Aged Wood!
Signet is aged four long years in pre-mellowed casks... casks enriched by prior use in aging other fine whiskies in our own distilleries. Time alone can produce such casks. And only such casks can produce Signet.
Your first sip of Signet will signal the fact that here, for the first time, is a bottled-in-bond whiskey with the light body and delicate flavor your cultivated taste demands. Try Signet with soda, straight, or in a cocktail—today!
This whiskey is 4 years old

1. "This whiskey tastes as fine—and different—as the ad said it would," the customer declared.
2. "Yes sir!" said the waiter. "This Signet is aged differently—like the finest French cognacs we serve.
3. "Like the best Scotches too...in casks that have been used before in aging other fine liquors.
4. "It's the fine old way, sir, but new to this country. Another Signet and soda, sir? Yes, sir!"

Bowers Tells Of Dictators Looking West

House Committee Hears Ambassador On Fascist Plans

Official concern that Franco's victory in Spain will bring intensification of German and Italian efforts at expansion of their influence in South America was manifested here yesterday.

Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, home from his post in Spain to report on conditions there, was heard by the House Foreign Affairs Committee in executive session and is reported to have described efforts of the dictators to utilize Franco as the spearhead of their drive in the Western Hemisphere. It is understood that the Ambassador, while lacking knowledge of the effect of these efforts, was in a position to tell of intense German-Italian activity to extend their economic and cultural influence in all the Spanish-speaking American lands.

At the same time, Senator Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico, urged immediate recognition of the Franco government. He issued a statement while Secretary of State Hull was making plain at his press conference that the State Department was moving cautiously in assembling all the information available before attempting to reach a decision in the matter of recognition.

Pittman Maps Change

On Capitol Hill, where interest in foreign affairs is daily becoming keener, Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, last night was revising his neutrality act amendments to distinguish between "declared" and "undeclared" wars.

Pittman said he would change his proposed amendment to direct the President to put neutrality act provisions immediately into effect when nations go to war by formal declaration.

Where a state of undeclared war existed, Pittman said, he proposed to allow the President a period of about 90 days to study the situation before invocation of provisions of the act.

Conference Today

If approved, it would be the first legislative recognition of undeclared warfare, such as Sino-Japanese hostilities, Germany's conquest of Austria and Czechoslovakia and recent border fighting between Hungary and Slovakia.

Pittman, whose amendment to the act would permit sales of ammunition to belligerents strictly on a "cash and carry" basis, will confer today with Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, members of a sub-committe arranging public neutrality act hearings beginning next Wednesday.

The sub-committee will agree on a schedule of witnesses and is expected to consider a set of rules for orderly conduct of the hearings.

Britain Offers War for Poland, London Hears

British

Minister Chamberlain had canceled a scheduled speech.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax conferred with Count Raczynski, Polish Ambassador, and later with Winston Churchill, former cabinet minister.

Chamberlain thereafter called a session of the inner cabinet, while Dominions Secretary Sir Thomas Inskip acquainted high commissioners of the British dominions with developments.

Usually reliable parliamentary sources said the Prime Minister would make a statement on the situation in the House of Commons tomorrow night without waiting for the full dress foreign affairs debate set for next Monday.

Chamberlain followed up yesterday's announcement of a drive to raise the strength of the territorial army to 340,000 men with indications that similar increases were being studied for the navy and air force.

Count Raczynski was believed to have learned of the cabinet's position regarding Poland in his interview with Viscount Halifax.

British who previously had said Britain's scheme for a European "halt Hitler" front would reach a climax during the visit here next week of Col. Joseph Beck, Polish Foreign Minister, now asserted more haste appeared necessary.

They indicated they regarded Germany's anti-Polish press campaign as more than an attempt to wreck Col. Beck's trip. The foreign minister is due here Monday.

Officials in London, Berlin and Warsaw, however, denied rumors the Nazis were planning an immediate drive against Poland's frontiers.

Anti-Pact Bloc Recedes

One diplomatic source said "new British proposals were presented to the Poles today" after a cabinet "anti-entanglement" faction had receded from opposition to far-reaching British military commitments.

Horne Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon were reported to have headed that faction.

The cabinet was represented now as being unanimous on the need for bold action.

There was no indication that Poland had abandoned her objections to joining directly any anti-aggression bloc with Soviet Russia.

Thus, it was said, a new British move might either leave out Russia or envisage some separate Anglo-Russian understanding in which both would support Poland.

The program for Col. Beck's visit includes a luncheon with King George VI in Windsor Castle.

But there still was keen British interest in Russia, particularly in light of far eastern reports that Japan was worried over the close relations developing between London and Moscow.

New War Scare Shakes Stocks To 1939 Lows

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 30.—A mystifying outburst of selling in the last hour of trading today bowled over leading stocks for losses of $1 to $4 and dropped the market generally to the lowest level this year.

Wall Street, nervous since the latest German drive to the East began, became more tense as rumors spread of an impending showdown between Germany and Poland. News from Berlin and Warsaw failed to substantiate the gossip.

Bonds fell with stocks under the selling blast. The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks was at the lowest since September war crisis.

Funk

Britain and France. The need for such trade was increased by establishment of "a new order" in central Europe, he said.

Funk made it clear, however, that he believed Germany's method of foreign trade—the barter system—was the most satisfactory method and that if the world wanted German trade, it would have to accept the Nazi ways.

Admits Financial Strain

[Following Germany's absorption of Bohemia-Moravia, Britain and France both disrupted trade talks with Germany.]

His reference to the importance of trade recalled Hitler's words in a speech February 30, when he said Germany must "export or die."

Regarding the new bank law to replace the 1924 law, he said:

"A country's currency is not stabilized by a bank of issue, but by responsible state leadership."

He admitted the capital market had been strained severely in the past year by the issuance of large state loans and needed a respite now to ready for the coming private industrial needs which he estimated at 1,000,000,000 marks ($400,000,000).

Says U. S. Is "Glutted"

"The world about us is laboring under grave economic and financial troubles. Gold is flowing irresistibly, it seems, into the glutted coffers of the United States.

"The old world, bereft of its gold, is finding its currencies tottering and its balance sheets shaken."

Funk extolled the new German-Rumanian trade agreement as furnishing a brilliant example of how commodities and raw materials could be successfully exchanged for German finished and semifinished manufactures.

He predicted "the world will not be able to ignore the productive and purchasing capacities of 90,000,000 people with a high standard of living."

Ukrainians Will Resist Nazi Protectorate, Editor Declares

Scranton Journalist Says Citizens Are Neither Fascists Nor Communists And Long Have Wanted Independence

Hitler will get no help from the Ukrainians if he tries to establish a German-protected "independent" Ukrainian state, according to Yaroslav J. Chyz, editor of Narodna Wola, Scranton, Pa., Ukrainian newspaper.

CHYZ

"The Ukrainians want to be free, but that has nothing to do with Hitler's appetite," Chyz said yesterday in an interview here. "We have wanted independence since before he was born." Ukrainians remember too well the hard rule of the Germans in their eight-month protectorate in 1918, he said, and for those who have forgotten there is a reminder in the treatment of Ruthenia by Hungarian Fascists since they occupied that portion of Czecho-Slovakia two weeks ago.

That occupation brought the menace of fascism closer to the Ukrainians, he continued, and exploded the idea that Hitler might help to free them. He emphasized that practically all Ukrainians are democratic rather than Fascist or Communist.

Radio propaganda from Budapest, Rome and Berlin since September has been listened to with close interest by many Americans of foreign extraction, he declared. Programs in English, German, Ukrainian and other languages tell them more about the "advantages" of Fascist government than they could learn about this country's government if they listened to the radio 24 hours a day, Chyz said.

'Body Window' Found to Treat Tuberculosis

Boston, March 30 (AP).—Treatment of tuberculosis by radiation through a "surgical window" in the human body was seen today as a "distinct possibility" by a Boston University physiologist.

He is Dr. Walter L. Mendenhall, inventor of a technique which allows investigators to observe the movement of an animal's lungs and heart through a transparent film placed over a surgically made opening in the chest.

"It should be possible to use the "thoracic window" as a covering for the exposed lungs in applying X-ray and ultra-violet rays in the treatment of tubercularly diseased parts in human beings," said Mendenhall.

State Fettering The Mind, Says Miss Thompson

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 30.—Miss Dorothy Thompson, special writer for The Washington Post and other newspapers, said here tonight the tendency of the world was towards the "liberation of instincts and the fettering of the mind and the creative forces by the state."

"That is the tendency," she admitted. "It may be halted. But it will not be halted without understanding."

Miss Thompson gave the first of three lectures on citizenship at the University of North Carolina.

Streator, Ill., March 30 (AP).—Frank Farrington, 66, former president of District 12 (Illinois) of the United Mine Workers of America, died suddenly today.

Brown Demands Pedestrian Control In Outlying Areas

More rigid enforcement of pedestrian control regulations in outlying sections was demanded yesterday by Superintendent of Police Brown in a memorandum to precincts.

Though the public has been "cooperative" downtown, Maj. Brown said, "it is noted at traffic-controlled intersections in outlying sections that there has been a tendency on the part of the public to disregard the regulation." Success of the plan, he pointed out, depends on strict observance throughout the city.

"Complaints have also been received," he added, "that motorists making a right or left hand turn have failed to yield the right of way to pedestrians crossing on the proper signal. This requires a strict enforcement."

Mine Tax Passed By Chile Senate

Santiago, Chile, March 30 (AP).—The Chilean Senate late tonight passed a reconstruction and relief bill, as recommended by the finance committee, including a 10 per cent tax on the profits of copper producing companies, largely United States owned.

The bill empowers the President to contract a huge foreign loan of 2,000,000,000 pesos ($64,000,000) and an internal loan of 500,000,000 pesos ($16,000,000). The measure now goes to the Chamber of Deputies.

Give Needy Legal Aid, Lawyers Told

Louisville, Ky., March 30 (AP).—Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, president of the American Bar Association, told the Kentucky Bar Association today providing legal aid for the needy was an obligation of lawyers.

"We are asking increased support of lawyers for legal aid work," he said, "to the end that it may never again be said that any man or woman in this country cannot get legal advice, or has justice denied or delayed because of financial inability to hire an attorney."

D. C. Supply Bill Hearing Ends

Hearings on the 1940 District supply bill were concluded yesterday with testimony by officials of the welfare department and public assistance division.

Chairman Collins, of the House Sub-committee on District appropriations, said the measure will be called up in the House next Thursday. While declining to predict the total, he said it would be within budget estimates.

Senate Pares War Material Fund by 60%

Measure Providing $100,000,000 Cut To $40,000,000

The Senate cut the strategic war materials bill to conform to the Administration's wishes yesterday after voting down emphatically a proposal to permit foreign nations to make war debt payments in such supplies.

By a vote of 33 to 31, the $100,000,000 measure was slashed to $40,000,000. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, offered the amendment to cut the four-year program to $10,000,000 annually, stating that ranking officers of the Army and Navy considered the smaller amount sufficient for the present. He said the Budget Bureau favored the reduction.

The proposal to permit acceptance of war materials in partial payment of debts went down by 48 to 18, following pleas by Administration leaders not to tie the national defense program to the war debt question.

Vote Follows Party Lines

While the vote closely followed party lines, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, opposed the plan, declaring it would mean a reopening of the entire debt settlement. He urged that the United States stand firm behind the settlement and demand what was agreed as due.

Final Senate action on the bill is expected today, while proponents of a similar measure in the House hope to bring it up for vote next week.

With the funds authorized, the Government would provide a war reserve of "strategic and critical" materials, such as antimony, chromium, manganese, nickel, rubber, silk, tin and tungsten.

Contract Let for Carrier

Meanwhile the Navy Department awarded a $31,800,000 contract to the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. for construction of the aircraft carrier Hornet.

The 19,900-ton vessel, similar to the carriers Yorktown and Enterprise, will take an estimated 34 months to complete. It will cost roughly 25 per cent more to build than either of those craft.

At the same time, the Navy awarded a $248,057 contract to the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, of Paterson, N. J., for aircraft engines and services and material to test and overhaul engines.

As the Senate recessed without finishing the war materials bill, Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, introduced a bill to authorize expenditure of $30,000 for experimentation with a new type of explosive ammunition for antiaircraft guns.

Barkley Attacks Plan

Majority Leader Barkley attacked the war debt proposal offered by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia.

This would require the President to go hawking around Europe asking them to pay something on account in chickens and eggs," Barkley declared, and added, "we wouldn't get a dime."

"We can't lose by it," Lodge shouted back.

Senator Swellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, charged that the proposal was a partisan attempt to "put the President on the spot" by requiring him to make an attempt to collect on the debts which could only fail. This, Lodge hotly denied.

10 More Held in Subway Thefts of $1,250,000

New York, March 30 (AP).—Ten new arrest were announced today by Assistant District Attorney Thayer in the investigation of alleged thefts from Turnstile coin boxes of the city-owned independent subway system.

Thayer said the total thefts would exceed $1,250,000. The ten men were former station agents of the subway system. Twenty-six persons previously arrested have been indicted.

Paris Must Pay for Italy's Aid In World War, Says Gayda justice and of the equilibrium of European order.

For Italy the present colonial problem has a twofold aspect—particular and general. The special problem is that of the Italian claims on France. Stripped of all elements of debate, this problem seems clear and elementary. There is no question of a vague and general right but of a definite right based upon a written document.

France has still to pay Italy the colonial debt contracted under Article 13 of the Treaty of London, containing conditions at the moment Italy engaged in the war on the side of the allies. That debt was settled by Great Britain by the cession of part of Somaliland. It must be settled by France, who 20 years after the war has ceded no colonies to Italy.

The Italian claims, therefore, are not improvised. Nor are they the result of secret understandings between Germany and Italy, or of the present events in Europe. They are merely the natural consequence of the French attitude.

This is the definite view taken by the Italians, and it is necessary to realize this in order to understand the reasons of the Italian policy with regard to France.

Justice Between Peoples

The year 1939 will be dominated by the general problem of colonies and also by the Italian-French problem. It should be studied in its essentials, but without passion. An equitable distribution of the colonies, i. e., of the means of labor required by the great producing nations, corresponds to the principle of international justice.

This justice between peoples is as necessary as social justice, and it is strange that the democracies who proclaim their adherence to the principles of social justice should remain deaf and hostile to the clamors of international justice.

Italy fully realizes that it is very difficult to persuade wealthy countries or classes to make concessions to poor nations and classes. Yet the democracies, reinforcing their intransigence, proclaim like France, that they will not cede an inch of their soil, and will, if necessary, support their refusal by armed resistance.

They should ask themselves this question: "Is it preferable to lose two or three millions of white men—an irreparable disaster in a war even if victorious—than to lose a few millions of Negroes not condemned to be massacred but merely transferred to another administration?"

Problem Is Simple

For Italy, the problem is simple. She has an abundance of man power for colonizing purposes. She has, therefore, the right when the moment of the redistribution of the colonies has arrived to claim a place proportioned to her capacity which is determined by her numbers, her force of resistance and her aptitude for the great productive undertakings of civilization.

Italy hopes that this fundamental problem of European peace and order will be understood from its dual angle of justice and necessity. Its pacific solution would be the real and certain beginning of authentic collaboration between the peoples.

People speak of a violent aggression on the part of Germany, but what is remarkable was that the incorporation of Czecho-Slovakia took place without bloodshed.

Czecho-Slovakia, as created by the peace treaties, was in reality a country and a system rather than a nation. This system might be useful for the group of states by which it had been constituted, but it did not seem necessary for the order and peace of Europe; that is, in the general interest.

The thorough revision of the political map of Czecho-Slovakia implies a considerable dislocation of the political forces and influence in central and Danubian Europe. Germany has increased her political territory by the annexation of all the Germans having belonged to Czecho-Slovakia. But this is merely the resultant of the historical and geographical facts which harmonize. This case is somewhat rare with the new political facts. History and geography have concentrated in Europe this immense mass of Germans which have now achieved their political union in the greater Germany.

There has also been a dislocation of political and economic influence, but this applies above all to relations between the great powers. By her protectorate in Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia, Germany has annexed the spheres of influence which formerly belonged to [illegible]. World history records numerous cases of such fluctuations which count for a great deal in progress.

The reactions of France and Great Britain to these events are caused, in the first place, by their discontent at the loss of these important spheres of influence. But they have not taken the same form in the nations bordering on Czecho-Slovakia, which are more directly affected by the political upheaval in that country.

Great Britain and France have failed in their attempt to create a political bloc for the encircling of Germany, which would have also acted against Italy, since it is impossible to isolate Germany so long as she disposes of Italy and the imperial relations of the latter. With the exception of Soviet Russia, all the countries invited to adhere—Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Turkey—have refused.

The fact is typical. It is a proof of the increasing political influence of Germany and Italy in these regions. It also shows that these countries do not wish to renew the abortive and unfortunate experiment of the sanctions which will go down in history as a unique and monstrous injustice against Italy.

Finally, it proves that the idea of collective security is henceforth doomed and that the principles of the League of Nations have ceased to exist in the conscience of the peoples, notwithstanding the diminished survival of the organization of Geneva.

This is why the Czecho-Slovak affair will soon be relegated to the archives. Europe will have digested it without much difficulty, like an assimilable, if bitter, pill.

An attempt is being made to represent this new increase of the German might as a menace and a source of alarm to Italy. Italy is intelligent enough to accept this new progress of history. The Czecho-Slovak stage of the march was a foregone conclusion. Italy had still some reservations as to the new state created by the decisions of Munich and the arbitration of Vienna. The proof is that contrary to France and Great Britain, Italy had not yet guaranteed the frontiers and the independence of Czecho-Slovakia.

But it still remains to show that the new distribution of forces and influences in central Europe is, as alleged by democratic countries, a menace to the previous interests of Italy and their legitimate development.

After the incorporation of Austria in Germany, it was already said that Danubian Europe would henceforth be closed to the Italian trade and civilization. The contrary has been the case.

The interdependence of the German and Italian interests—in other words, the Rome-Berlin axis—retains its whole force and continues to function. Its functions concern, in addition to the Danubian sphere, the general system of Europe and its necessary revision. The axis itself is flanked by unchanged and even developing collaboration between Italy and the other nations interested in the Danubian problems—Hungary, Jugoslavia, Poland, and Rumania.

This interdependence is now due to function without menaces of aggression but firmly and justly in quite another direction; it must tend toward equilibrium of the European forces, a matter closely connected with the question of colonies.

Duce Demands Satisfaction on Suez Claims

Italy Won't 'Remain Mediterranean Prisoner,' He Says

By the United Press.

Catanzaro, Italy, March 30.—Premier Mussolini warned France today that Fascist armed strength, having proved itself in Spain, will "forge straight ahead" and never will permit Italy to "remain a prisoner in the Mediterranean."

Il Duce addressed cheering crowds in the great Lictor square of Cosenza and later spoke before 30,000 Italians in Catanzaro on a tour carrying him through the Calabria region of southern Italy, along the sole of the Italian boot.

He asserted that Italy's claims on the Suez Canal must be satisfied.

Mussolini's speeches, brief but belligerent, came only a few hours after French Premier Daladier had announced that France refused to yield "a single inch" of her soil to Italy and that any initiative toward peaceful negotiation of Mussolini's claims on Djibouti, the Suez and Tunisia must come from Rome.

Il Duce made it clear to his audience here—sheep raisers and olive growers—that he intends to push his claims against France.

"Did we forge ahead in Spain?" he asked.

"Si, si!" roared back the crowd.

"Then I tell you we will continue to forge straight ahead, despite the obstacles that anyone tries to place in our path," Mussolini said. "We are not afraid of what the future holds for us."

He told of plans for the development of the Calabria region with "quickened steps."

May Reply to Daladier

"These steps are bound to lead Italy to its new and greatest destiny," he said.

Mussolini and his entourage departed tonight for Reggio at the tip of the Italian peninsula.

Future Rests With Managers, Says McClellan

America's future rests with a "manager class" who look out for themselves, Dr. William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., yesterday told members of the Cosmopolitan Club at their weekly luncheon in the Carlton Hotel.

American must have food, clothing and shelter, Dr. McClellan said, and the country can permit no citizen to suffer physically. But with this attitude prevailing, he warned of the danger of training an entire race who expect someone to give them a job or the Government to take care of them.

Likening the "manager class" to the pioneers, whose lives and welfare depended on their own efforts, he said the work and example of these "realists" will be the salvation of the "non-managers" and the country.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS PLUS PAY DAY! Is this week-end going to be a pppin? With the Cherry Blossom festival in full swing and Government pay day falling at the same time, all of the night spots are due to be crowded with both visitors from out of town and our own home folks.

When the Cherry Blossom Queen, Peggy Townsend, sings at Cafe Caprice this evening, it's expected that she'll wear her royal robes. We hope she'll still be wearing her crown, too.

Madrillon is tossing its own "Cherry Blossom Festival," with its queen and her maids of honor to be selected around midnight. "Blossom Time" music will be played by Carr and Don and their orchestra and songs by charming Adelita Varela, who'll also act as mistress of ceremonies. Peter Borras, ever the ingenious host, has planned appropriate menu novelties, including frozen cherry salad and a "blossom cocktail," with a base of wild cherry brandy. Even the after-dinner mints will be decorated with cherry petals.

Wardman's resourceful mixologist, Einhart Brodt, has invented two special drinks in honor of the "Blossom Festival." One is a cocktail with a base of cherry brandy and regular brandy (Myomy). The other is a tall cobbler combining cherry brandy, gin and lime juice. Einhart expects to decorate both of these rare confections with cherry blossoms.

Mayfair is also breaking out a special "cherry blossom cocktail" today. It is said to have a very unblossomlike kick.

Hi Hat (beating the bell, as usual) has been serving a "blossom cocktail" all week. We hear that if a spray of cherry blossoms is placed in one of these concoctions, it will immediately burst into flame.

FISH CIRCUS: Authorities on fish and their fancies will be guests of honor at the "dedication party" of the Neptune Room, to be held on Monday, April 10, the day before the formal opening of this new spot to Mr. and Mrs. Public.

Big sensation of the evening is expected to be the "fish circus" of Mr. Fred Orsinger, head of the Department of Commerce aquarium. Mr. Orsinger is said to have a collection of real performing fish, including "walking fish" perfectly capable of going for a stroll, and Siamese fighting fish which turn all colors of the rainbow as they go into battle. Mr. Charles E. Jackson, acting commissioner of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, will be toastmaster and also speak on the fine art of serving fish.

Tiny Jackie Burroughs (Hour Glass) is still a-flutter over her grand experience of singing over that experimental television hour with Shirley Ross. Jackie wore her best spring bonnet, her best spring smile—is said to have been a pretty eyeful and a sweet earful.

TROIKA SCENE: Tables crowded with plutocratic-looking folks . . . Waiters rushing about with flaming brochettes of shashlik . . . Mrs. Helen Hamilton looking as soignee and beautiful as a Russian grand duchess should look . . . Sasha Lukas violining "Valse Bluette" . . . fiat to snap your heartstrings—especially if you've sampled one or two of Mischa's magical vodka cocktails . . . Vanya and Lola do a sailor dance with romping fire . . . Flocks of new skits, new dances, all executed with that precision, gaiety and color that are Troika's own . . . The tangled harmonies of tzigane music and the Big Moment—when Vanya, one of the finest dancers in the country, steps out in his breath-snatching solo number.

LOUANNA

Ringside camera: At Lounge Riviera: The just-married Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Krewson, with their wedding attendants, dancing an hour or two away until time for their "honeymoon express." Mr. and Mrs. Laird Dunlop 3d doing the smoothest of rumbas . . . At Shar-Zad: Liby Holman (Mrs. Smith Reynolds), tanned to a golden copper from her stay in Florida. Jean Abbey of the radio dancing with Singer Buddy Clark, Barytone Howard Phillips.

STEPPING STONE: Dorothy Stone, daughter of the great Fred Stone, and her dancing partner, Charles Collins, will head the Shoreham floor show beginning April 10. This pair has appeared in many musical successes, including "Gay Divorcee" and "As Thousands Cheer." Top number of their act will be "Preview of the New York World's Fair with Mr. Collins presumably impersonating the pylon. Serge Gayflash, European juggler, will also join the Blue Room show next week. Dancers Taylor and Allen will be held over.

Louanna lights: Mayfair's swingtime lark, Louanna, is giving up hotel life and settling down for a session of home life in a new apartment. We hear there's to be a housewarming, too, some midnight after Mayfair closes.

FOOD SUPERLATIVE: Broccoli as prepared with cheese sauce by the chef of the Hamilton. And you're likely to get it with that fine Hamilton "dollar dinner."

The seafood platters at Hall's historic restaurant. A skillful selection of the tastier denizens of the sea, and prepared with finesse.

Pepper steak, Canton style—an exotic delicacy you'll find on the Bamboo Gardens menu.

FAIRLY PERSONAL: Ardath James, the chic and witty young person, who is the manager of Lotus Frances Allis dancers, used to be a concert pianist. She says: "But I decided to give it up and let Paderewski carry on alone."

Tiny Libby Frazier, canary of the Uptown cocktail lounge, is shopping for an Easter frock—in the children's department. You see, she wears a size 9.

Emil Croci, chef of the Ambassador, has won several prizes for the masterly way in which he roasts turkeys.

Kurt, artist of the Pall Mall Room, is designing posters for the Ball Boheme.

Favorite phrase of Brown Derby's Al Simmonds, "Aha! Fresh money's coming on horseback."

Matt Windsor (Anchor Room) recently played a short accordion concert over the telephone for the benefit of a good Anchor patron temporarily under the weather with a heavy cold.

Folks who know Capt. Don Dickerman (Pirates' Den) from away back, tell us that he was responsible for Rudy Vallee's first appearance on the radio. Capt. Don and Rudy have been great pals for many seasons.

Miss Anderson To Sing at Lincoln Shrine

Ickes Solves Dispute By Giving Memorial For Easter Concert

Marian Anderson will sing from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial at 5 p. m. Easter Sunday, Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced yesterday.

The bitter seven-week controversy over the colored contralto's concert, which has involved the D. A. R., District School Board, Congress and Mrs. Roosevelt, is not ended with Ickes' decision, however, it was indicated last night.

At the office of Representative McGranery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who has introduced a resolution calling for Congressional investigation of the school board's refusal of Central High School auditorium for the concert, it was stated that "we've got to make sure this sort of thing doesn't happen again."

Government's Answer

Charles Houston, chairman of the Marian Anderson Citizens Committee, said "Secretary Ickes' announcement is the Federal Government's answer to the reactionary position of the local government and th eD. A. R. But we will not call off our fight for revision of the school board rules."

Interior Department officials predicted that an audience of approximately 50,000 would hear Miss Anderson's half-hour concert, which is to be carried by amplifiers from the great emancipator's monument to park spaces on either side of the reflecting pool. The program will be carried over the N. B. C. Blue network.

Free to Public

The recital is to be free to the public. "This seems to me to be a good use of the public facilities," Ickes said, "and the request was granted." The request came from Howard University, sponsoring Miss Anderson's appearance here, and "other interested citizens of Washington," according to the Secretary.

Meanwhile it was announced in Richmond that Mrs. Roosevelt will appear on the same program with Miss Anderson July 2 when the thirtieth annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People takes place in the Virginia capital.

The First Lady recently resigned from the D. A. R. in protest against its ban on a performance by Miss Anderson in Constitution Hall.

ration agreement he agreed to give up his claim to the trust fund, but Mrs. Stinson agreed to quit bothering him," former Representative Carroll L. Beedy, Stinson's attorney, declared.

"It was stated that either could bring annulment or divorce proceedings, but what has been done since that time has gone beyond all reason."

"I was to be unmolested," Stinson told the court, "to pursue my work and my life as I saw fit. Detectives followed me from the beginning and hounded my footsteps in Europe. As soon as I landed abroad I learned that every friendship, every connection I had was being broken back in America.

"From coast to coast, and I mean from coast to coast, all my friends were being told bad things about me. It was in direct violation of our agreement."

Harold N. Marsh, Washington attorney who was named as one of the trustees in the $230.000 trust fund agreement, testified yesterday that Mrs. Crounse had said she wished to provide for Stinson "during his lifetime in order that he might continue his creative work in art and literature."

"I remember distinctly that she said several times during the afternoon that she did not know whether she would marry Mr. Stinson, but she wanted to create this trust so that he could go on with his work," Marsh said.

Miss Jessica Shoemaker, the nurse of Mrs. Stinson, who is accused of being a party to "the scheme to drug Mrs. Crounse into matrimony to get hold of her money," was not at the bank when the trust papers were signed but witnessed the signature of Mrs. Crounse the next day, Marsh said.

As the numerous checks written by Mrs. Crounse and Stinson under his power as her attorney during their short-lived romance continued to enliven the coultroom yesterday, one was conspicuous by its absence.

"Where is that $1,000 check written on September 25, two days before the wedding and for wedding expenses. My client says it was written by Mrs. Crounse herself. She claims she was drugged and didn't know anything. I'd like to see that check," Beedy exclaimed.

trol, was named executive secretary of the NTEC, familiarly known as the "monopoly" committee.

The chubby, 43-year-old economist asserted early last year that the business recession was primarily due to "inadequate purchasing power," which had declined because of "price manipulation and the concentration of ownership which makes monopoly possible over wide and strategic areas."

University Professor

A native of Millville, N. J., Henderson worked his way through high school and Swarthmore College. He taught at the University of Pennsylvania and the Carnegie Institute of Technology, and later became deputy secretary of the State of Pennsylvania under Gifford Pinchot. For eight years he was connected with the Russell Sage Foundation.

Frank, who is 49, has been prominently named as a candidate for a place on the District Court of Appeals as well as for chairmanship of the SEC. It is understood that President Roosevelt's decision to give Henderson top-ranking SEC position clinched his determination to return to the practice of law. He was formerly connected with the New York firm of Greenbaum, Wolf and Ernst. Frank has been at various times connected with AAA, RFC and PWA.

Father Admits Beating Son, 6, For Truancy

Jailed Pending Investigation by Probation Officer

Cut and bruised, 6-year-old William Leitch, jr., told Jolice Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday his father had beaten him with a strap. His testimony caused the father to be jailed.

The father, William W. Leitch, 29, an unemployed welder, admitted he had struck the child with a leather strap from a toy pistol holster but denied he had beaten the boy too strenuously.

"You ought to get what you gave him," Judge Curran told the father and ordered the case to the probation officer. Leitch was remanded to jail pending investigation.

Mrs. Helen Leitch, William's mother, obtained the warrant charging her husband with assault.

The boy told the court he had played hookq from school and his father had struck him with the buckle end of the strap. Leitch denied using the buckle end and said his son also had torn up his report card.

"So you think he ought to get a beating like this for it?" Judge Curran asked. "You've probably played hooky from school many times and probably have torn up your report card too."

Leitch told the court he did all the cooking and housework every day except Sunday "whether I am working or not." His wife is employed. The family lives at 515 Seward square southeast.

Wallace Acts to Save Farm Bill After Thrusts Made in Senate

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace, hurried to Capitol Hill late yesterday after Senators had made a series of legislative thrusts at the Administration's farm program.

Flanked by Agriculture Department officials, Wallace conferred at length with Senators Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, and Byrnes (Democrat, South Carolina, in a room a few doors from the Senate chamber.

The conference presumably dealt with these earlier developments:

Approval by the Senate Agriculture Committee of a proposal to return to farmers 3,000,000 bales of cotton on which the Government made loans. This was regarded as a substitute for the export subsidy plan advanced by President Roosevelt.

Approval by the same committee of a "cost of production" farm bill which would substitute Government price-fixing on a long list of farm products for the present crop and marketing control provisions.

Introduction of legislation in the Senate to provide the $250,000,000 in additional farm benefit payments which the House eliminated from the agricultural appropriations bill. These payments were not recommended by President Roosevelt.

Most members of the Senate Agriculture Committee said the new cotton proposal, offered by Southern Senators, was intended to block the export subsidy proposal of President Roosevelt.

Senator Bankhead said, however, that approval of this proposal would not preclude action later on the export subsidy.

Bankhead, author of the Southerners' proposal, said the conference with Wallace had "produced no change in my plans." Earlier he had said the Southern Senators, many of whom are outspoken in opposing the Presidential suggestion, would attempt to get Senate action on their proposal today. It would permit cotton growers to buy cotton from loan stocks at 3 cents a pound, provided they reduced their production this year by an equivalent amount.

The Government now has more than 9 cents a pound invested in this loan cotton, and so it would take a loss of more than $30 a bale, or $90,000,000, on the 3,000,000 bales which could be released this year under the bill.

Senators Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, and George (Democrat), of Georgia, engaged in a sharp exchange over the White House subsidy plan, although no legislation has been introduced as yet to carry it out.

Rich Girl, Poor Boy Dominate 'Cafe Society'

Carroll, MacMurray and Ross Are Costarred; Benchley Adds Humor to Palace Bill; Short Flashes Concerning Amusements

"CAFE SOCIETY." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Virginia Van Upp, co-starring Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, with Shirley Ross, Claude Gillingwater, Jessie Ralph, Allyn Joslyn, Paul Hurst, Cupid Ainsworth, Mary Parker, Robert Emmett Keane and Hilda Plowright. Song by Burton Lane and Frank Loesser. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, March 28. At Loew's Palace Theater.

BELL

THE IMPLICATIONS of the title to the contrary notwithstanding, this picture does not confine itself to New York's plushiest night spots. There are, to be sure, a few glimpses of what has come to be known as "cafe society" in its favorite haunts and at its favorite pursuits, but, in essence, "Cafe Society" is merely another triangle story adapted to the screen with fine skill and peopled by players who know their way around in this sort of thing.

It already has been set forth in this space that the present Paramount exhibit is virtually the inverse of "Rich Man, Poor Girl." In this case it happens to be "Rich Girl, Poor Man." This rich girl is a beautiful blonde—as anyone impersonated by the gorgeous Madeleine Carroll would have to be—who has been "out" for seven years and still is unwed. The poor boy is a ship news reporter who succumbs to the lure of marriage to the platinum young lady, not knowing that the wedding is simply a means to winning a $1,000 wager with a gossip columnist who has perpetrated the social error of informing Christopher West that she no longer is news.

From that point on, the filmed fable takes on the usual contours of a serio-comic consideration of what happens when opposite poles of the social scale become involved in the casual business of matrimony. But it is not all caviar and champagne for Miss West after she has linked herself more or less indissolubly with Chick O'Bannon, the newspaper guy. Mr. O'Bannon has a dash of Irish in him, as you might guess from his name. He slaps his bride around a bit and takes her for a 5-mile jaunt on a surfboard that does her physical and mental well being no good whatever. After that things sort of straighten themselves out. That is, with the aid of Chris' understanding grandfather, who seems glad to have had his spanking responsibilities pre-empted by the new husband of his favorite granddaughter.

There is a good deal of spunk in "Cafe Society." Much of it emanates from the vibrant personality of Madeleine Carroll, in the role of Chris West; more from the determined he-mannishness of Fred MacMurray, in the role of O'Bannon. These two play the costellar parts with disarming naturalness and more than a vague suggestion that people from opposite strata of society really might be like that. In the end, of course—but why go into that?

There are many in the supporting cast who aid in the creation of whatever delusion of grandeur "Cafe Society" is able to compound. Foremost among them is the veteran Claude Gillingwater, who, for once, is assigned to a conciliatory and kindly role that permits him, for the nonce, to misplace his vial of vitriol. Jessie Ralph is another who does much for the comic aspects of the firm, in the role of the mother of the venomous columnist, impersonated by Allyn Joslyn. Mr. Joslyn also does a neat piece of work. So does Paul Hurst, as the understanding bartender who does so much to snap Christopher West out of herself.

A role of costellar proportions, that of the "gardenia girl" in the night club, in which a considerable portion of the action centers, is handsomely played by Shirley Ross, who last night terminated a successful week of personal appearances at the Earle Theater. One song is assigned to Miss Ross in this subject and it comes late in the play's revelations. It is worth waiting to hear. Miss Ross has a way with her and here completes the "triangle" upon which "Cafe Society" depends for its conflict and emotional "punch."

Probably we ought to pay another tribute to Lucius Beebe, The Post's Sunday columnist, by saying that he is as uninspired a "bit" actor as we ever have seen on the screen. Mr. Beebe is a young man of parts whom we know personally and admire—but not as an actor!

Under the direction of Edward H. Griffith, "Cafe Society" progresses smoothly and, at times, excitingly—as in the case of that surfboard ride, for example—and has been executed with a fine sense of the gloss necessary to make the title pat. It is not an important film, as goes without saying, but it is an eminently pleasing and agreeable one.

On the supplementary bill at the Palace this week we have another of Mr. Robert Benchley's quaint conceits, as chief condiment of the feature, and, as a secondary excitement, another of the provocative crime pictures that prove that it does not pay to buck the constabulary. The "News of the Day," as usual, completes the program.

Dots and Dashes

So what do two stars of the legitimate stage do to kill time between matinee and night performances at the National? . . . Well, on Wednesday evening, at about dusk, John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie could have been found down at the Lincoln Memorial seeping up the contour of another great profile . . . "Jim" Brennan, Eastern division manager of RKO-Keith Theaters, was a poacher in Hardie Meakin's office yesterday afternoon . . . Just down for a day, reveling in the receipts being compiled by "Love Affair," costarring Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer—which, incidentally, goes another week on Fifteenth street . . . Buddy Clark, headliner of last week's bill at Loew's Capitol, a genial caller yesterday afternoon . . . In tow of Kay Kyser's publicist, of all people . . . What is this, theater rivalries gone soft all of a sudden? . . . Col. Jason Joy, with the glamorous Meredith Howard on his arm, an interested spectator at the preveiw showing of "Story of Alexander Graham Bell," at Constitution Hall Wednesday night . . . Col. Joy is a high executive of Tewntieth Century-Fox, producers of the picture . . . Miss Howard is a high executive of pulchritude—having once been a "Follies" girl, or something of the sort, under the Ziegfeld banner . . . She still is, if you ask us!

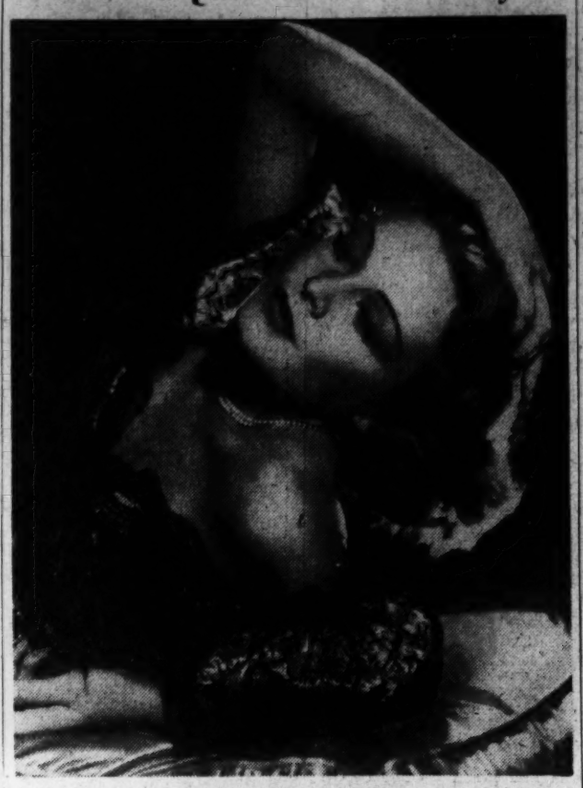
Self-Consciousness Note

I wish they wouldn't call Mr. Bell "Mr. Bell" so much during "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." For no reason whatever, it was a little disconcerting. "No relation," needless to remark, but it's nice that eminence attaches to the name, even so.

'Saint' Sanders

After an extensive search that lasted months for an actor best suited to portray the title role in the "Saint" series of modern mystery films, RKO Radio signed George Sanders. He will be seen soon in "The Saint Strikes Back."

Is Blond Queen of 'Cafe Society'



MADELEINE CARROLL,
who appears in the gold-plated role of Christopher West, opposite Fred MacMurray, in aramount's production of "Cafe Society," which opened yesterday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. The picture is done in opulent manner and affords Shirley Ross, Claude Gillingwater, Jessie Ralph, Allyn Joslyn and numerous others ample opportunity to disclose in what manner the "other half" lives in the swankiest of New York's night spots

Munis Ponder—Home or Vacation?

Tale of a Hollywood household:

Q. Mr. Muni, what do you plan to do following completion of your part as Benito Juarez in "Juarez?"

A. We have no definite plans. Everything is up in the air, so to speak.

Q. Are you thinking of a trip at all, perhaps to New York?

A. No, not New York. I do not care for it at all at this time of year.

Q. That's out, then?

A. Yes, definitely. Pardon me, Mr. Dieterle wants me on the set.

Brief time elapse while questioner steps over to nearby chair.

Q. Interesting scene, isn't it, Mrs. Muni?

A. Extremely interesting I'm glad I happened to drop in at the studio today.

Q. Are you and Mr. Muni planning a little trip when he finishes the picture?

A. Not exactly. Our plans are rather indefinite. But I think we will visit New York.

Q. (Asked of reader) Where are the Paul Munis going when he has finished "Juarez?"

A. (By reader) New York.

Washington's Ring Used in Movie

George Washington's seal ring has been secured to lend authenticity, to "Sons of Liberty," new historical featuret in Technicolor.

When Washington sent a letter to Haym Salomon asking for money to help the Continental troops over their rough spots during the American Revolution, he sealed the envelope with the ring. This same historical occurrence is re-enacted in the film.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 30.—I doubt if the Metropolitan's Polish tenor, Jan Kiepura, will get a movie offer when he comes to sing in concert next month. Of all the prima donnas we've ever had (and have we had plenty) Kewpie, to most people, was the most exasperating. I must admit he could think up more ways to annoy the front office than any human I've ever known.

HOPPER

Once, on location, when he was playing a singing fisherman and the sun was fast dying behind him—with most of the 150 extras in water to the waist, oats in line under their own sail—he was supposed to scoop up a fish and say, "look mama, what I brought you." He picked up the fish all right, but yelled, "Ouch—it bit me." In spite of the fact that the fish was dead! It took the whole staff 25 hours to cool off before they could remake that shot.

His wife, Marta Eggert, had an experience, too. In the first place, they denied strenuously they were married, which wasn't a very happy situation for either studio. Universal paid her $35,000 for a picture she never made. In spite of all, they amused me no end—I like them. In fact, I'm the only one in the whole studio who went to their farewell reception. I'm wondering if I'll be invited to hear him sing!

You should hear Edna Mae Oliver tell her story of visiting Boston during the recent blizzard. Marooned in her hotel room for three days, she finally decided she had to see the sights. So strapped on her New England galoshes, tied her head in a fascinator, and buffeted her way across Boston Common. Now she has enough strength to balance Mickey Rooney on one knee, and Wally Beery on the other.

Elizabeth Patterson was as excited and cute as a bride at her cocktail party the other day. The first big one she's given since coming here. Wish I had as many friends as that. I asked her why she gave it and she said, "Well, I've read so much about all these plush parties, I thought if I gave one I'd get a bid to some of them."

When I asked Tyrone Power for a piece of gum, he said, "I haven't any—Sonja Henie just stripped me clean."

Joe Pasternak insisted that Grover Jones, who's writing the story, "The Under Pup," get thoroughly acquainted with his leading lady. It's working out okay. I fooled you, she's Gloria Jeans, aged 10.

A little boy came on the "Old Maid" set and asked Miriam Hopkins for autographs, to be auctioned off at a charity in New York. But Miriam said she was too busy. Bette Davis overheard. "What's that? Bring them over here, boy. I'll sign them for you."

Dodge City-ites, who are hoping to get all the latest Easter styles from our visiting stars are going to be mighty disappointed. They'll all get off the train in Western costume.

The most popular people at Warner's are Mae Robson, 75, and Janet Chapman, 5. The studio had a tough time persuading Mae she shouldn't go to Dodge City. They were afraid the trip might be too much for her. "What?" cried Mae, "Why, with the exception of Janet Chapman, I'm the youngest person here."

Saw Madeline Carroll and E. H. Griffith lunching at Lucey's. When I started to tell a story, Eddie said, "don't give it to her unless you want her to use it on the air first."

Claude Binyon, back from Arizona where he wrote "Arizona," went to Columbia and found he had no office. Said, "Don't worry—I'll find a place. So with a property man, they hoisted a tent on Stage 8. No work was done for two hours while he held a reception. And no man ever got an office quicker!

If all goes well, we'll soon be able to eat corned beef and cabbage at our favorite Farmer's market. Bob Murphy is contemplating building an annex there.

Hear that Sam Woods has a swell picture in "Good-Bye, Mr. Chips" and that Greer Garson will be hailed as another discovery. Yes, she can act, and how!

Cox to Demand Hearing on Labor Board

Approves Resolution Of Rep. Anderson Calling for Inquiry

By International News Service.

The House move for a Congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board gained support yesterday when Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, announced he would demand hearings before the Rules Committee next week.

Members of the board may be summoned for questioning, Cox said, in approving a resolution by Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, calling for the inquiry.

Cox is ranking Democrat on the Rules Committee, which granted partial hearings on the resolution to Anderson and then postponed action temporarily.

Anderson has a petition on Speaker Bankhead's desk calling for a vote to repeal the labor act. He filed the petition after President Roosevelt advised party leaders that he was opposed to opening the act up for revision at this session of Congress.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, in a radio speech last night, declared "Congress should so amend the law as to accomplish the purpose stated in its title—'to diminish the causes of labor disputes burdening or obstructing interstate and foreign commerce.'"

Hoffman Quotes Green

Hoffman quoted William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, as saying "labor has found itself coerced by a new and powerful bureaucracy" in discussing the labor board. The Michigan member asserted that C. I. O. had fallen "under the domination of Communists, although its leader, John L. Lewis, is not one, and using Communist methods, it proceeded, by means of sit-down strikes, threats, intimidation and violence, not only to unionize the unorganized, but to raid the membership of the A. F. of L." He added:

"The National Labor Relations Board became the active ally of the C. I. O., until, as President Green said last week it 'through decisions clearly in favor of the C. I. O. and against the A. F. of L. is working out the destruction of the American Federation of Labor.'"

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Pro Arte String Quartet of Brussels (Alphonse Onnou, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and Robert Maas) Thursday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1 (Brahms), Quartet No. 3, Op. 22 (Hindemith), Quartet in D major, K 499 (Mozart).

Playing the fifth in the series of six concerts which will close tomorrow afternoon, the Pro Arte Quartet drew to the Library of Congress last evening an audience which filled Coolidge Auditorium and the lobby as well. From the beginning of their present visit, the Belgian musicians have not lacked at any of their appearances the admiring attention which their excellent performances merit, and the accommodation for listeners has on no occasion met the demand.

Alphonse Onnou and his associates opened their program with the C minor quartet of Brahms, that poignantly yearning work which so completely represents the composer's inner disquietude and uncertainty. That it was only a passing mood we know from other compositions in which his sturdy independence and firm faith are patent, but while the mood lasted it colored his thought deeply. Even in the two allegro movements where vitality is urgent, one feels the note of doubt, while the plaintive romanza is a continual questioning of destiny, and the allegretto is eloquent of longing for the unattainable perfection and beauty.

In the splendid reading of Paul Hindemith's third quartet, the players surpassed anything they have done hitherto in interpretation of the contemporary music on their programs. The clarity of their exposition was a matter not only of technical exactness but also of complete consentience in every detail of phrasing. To present the logic of the composition so convincingly was no small feat, for the music has a subtle dialectic that is not easy to analyze.

Written when Hindemith was only 27, this quartet is one of his early works which will undoubtedly survive beside his more mature compositions. The utter sincerity of the music stamps it as an expression of its period. It is positive, powerful music, motivated by a logical feeling for form, and irresistible in its sinewy strength. Its thematic statements have the incisiveness of a keen intelligence and its harmonic idiom shows that same intelligence directed at problems of tonality. If it seems occasionally more motorized than emotional, that is because of the driving force of the wind.

The program closed with the familiar D major quartet of Mozart, which was composed in August, 1786, shortly after the production of "Le Nozze di Figaro." It is so different in style from the quartets he dedicated to Haydn that some commentators have suggested that it was a deliberate bid for popularity. Even his first biographer, Otto Jann, said that it "attempts to meet the public taste wihout sacrificing the dignity of the quartet style," which is merely another way of saying that the emotions are not so deeply felt nor the ideas so artistically exalted.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 30 (INS).—Arrived home from San Francisco today, two hours behind schedule, and maybe you think I didn't have to hustle to get out a column. The first news I heard was that Paramount will team Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour in "The Road to Mandalay." This is the first time these two have been together, and just to make the cast all the more imposing, they are putting Bob Hope in with Dot and Bing as a featured player.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I supposed, of course, with these crooners, we'd have a 100 per cent musical, but beyond harmonizing and a few songs contributed by each, it is a straight story laid in India, the South Sea islands and Honolulu. That sounds suspiciously as if there is a sarong in the offing for Dorothy and that they have done a little lifting from Rudyard Kipling. But we can worry about that when we come to it. Dorothy first has "Disputed Passage" to make, and Bing will be tied up at least two months in "The Star Maker."

Barbara Stanwyck still owes RKO a picture and it's two-to-one it will be "Headline News," Rita Weiman's Cosmopolitan Magazine story. That title is a misnomer because th yarn isn't a newspaper story but concerns a tycoon called for an investigation on the loss of $6,000,000 in his business and about to commit suicide when his daughter and her boy friend step in and take a hand. There are two strong femme roles and if Barbara likes the script she's almost sure to make his following "Golden Boy."

Excitement ran high on the Warner lot today while everyone was preparing to leave for Kansas for the "Dodge City" preview. I managed to get in a few words with Hal Wallis, who told me that he has been preparing an English play for Edward G. Robinson. I was interested to hear that the play, "Footsteps in the Dark," by Jeffrey Dell and Bernard Merivale, has a twist not unlike that of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," which did good business at the box office. A little surprising since the hero was a murderer. Anatole Litvak is getting ready to direct, and as soon as Hal gets the "Dodge City" hi-jinks over with he will select a supporting cast.

Mae West in a play at the World's Fair in New York? There's a "natural" if I ever heard one, and it sounds far more logical to me than the various and assorted film plans announced for the buxom siren. Today I heard that Cole Porter has been confabbing long distance with Monte Woolley about a play he wants him to stage, which is none other than the one Herbert Fields wrote and sold to Para when Mae was a star there. Since movie censorship would play havoc with this yarn about a Diamond Lil of the Louis XV period, a stage show is the next best thing. The combination of Cole Porter's music and Mae at the World's Fair ought to bring the tourists' sheckles rolling in by the bushel.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Bob Burns have dated the stork again for August; the John Jacob Astors are giving Hollywood a whirl and seem to have lots of fun. Are Mrs. Warren Hymer, estranged wife of the actor, and Guy Rennie, a new twosome? Lyle Talbot and his wife, who have been apart for months dining tete-a-tete at a cafe; George Arliss and his bride of some forty or more years getting a round of applause when they tripped the light fantastic at a cafe; Ken Murray stepping out with Andrea Leeds, who has always been his big moment.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 30.

TIME:: Harold Clurman, director of the Group Theater, received a script from a hopeful dramatist yesterday . . . The first scene bore the descriptive: "Setting—a Primeval Forest. Time—10,000 years before the Roman dynasty" . . This was followed by Scene 2, which bore the descriptive: "Time—Six days later."

ERROR: The published version of "The American Way" omits the important speech Fredric March makes to the bank depositors—the scene which is the highlight of the show . . . George S. Kaufman, who read the galley proofs, didn't notice any such mistake. Two days after publication, however, the absence of this all-important speech was discovered by Anne Kaufman, George's daughter—who is 13.

PENANCE: When the cast of "Outward Bound" attended a dinner at the White House, one member of the group asked President Roosevelt if he had any birthday plans . . . "I'm going to do penance on my birthday," the President confessed. "——by listening to a Hitler speech."

COURTESY: Leif Erikson did the voice commentation for "Crisis," the anti-Nazi documentary film which records Hitler's invasion of Czecho-Slovakia . . . Erikson is under contract to Paramount, whose permission he first had to secure . . . "It's just a travelogue," Leif told them—but Paramount insisted that he discuss it with their attorney. Erickson called him and repeated: "It's a movie called 'Crisis.' About Czecho-Slovakia and Hitler. Anti-Nazi, of course. Y'know, just a travelogue" . . . "But Paramount Films can't be involved in politics," the attorney declared . . . "Suppose I do it without Paramount's consent?" Leif asked. "What penalty do I suffer?" . . . "Well," the lawyer advised, "it would be mighty discourteous of you" . . . "You are legally notified herewith," Lief replied, "that Leif Erickson is mighty discourteous."

SPEECH: Stanley Ridges, former Theater Guild actor, has been assigned to improve Maxie Rosenbloom's diction and to help foster the former fighter's screen career . . . "Aw, it's no use." Ridges finally announced. "Your voice is terrible" . . . "Listen," Maxie protested. "If you Theater Guild guys took as many raps on the kisser as I did, you'd be lucky if any words came out at all."

CHATTER: Judge Martin Manton, who is being defended by ex-U. S. Attorney Martin Conboy, will have a change of counsel . . . Fritz Kuhn is moving—to Austin street, Kew Gardens . . . Darryl Zanuck, after viewing Elsa Maxwell's screen test, insists she's the most prominent candidate for the Marie Dressler roles . . . The New York and 'Frisco fairs will announce a mutual understanding. April 30 will be "New York Day" at the 'Frisco Fair and May 14 will be "'Frisco Day" here. Mayor Rossi of Los Angeles will visit New York that day . . . The newly appointed Supreme Court Justice Felix Benvenga has decided to be a candidate for the Court of General Sessions.

ENTERPRISE: Norman Bel Geddes, for the World's Fair, is producing Dr. Seuss' idea—a photographic device which will deliver to couples a picture revealing how their baby will look. It's a composite, blending the outline of a baby's face, the upper portion of the man's face and the lower portion of the woman's face . . . In all the photos the babies will have their fathers eyes. This because in all the tests women's eyes photographed too uninfantile and much too all-knowing.

SWANK: George Jessel now is an accepted member of the Palm Beach set. When Jessel first arrived there one of the Whitney clan called upon him . . . "How much would you charge to come over to our house and entertain us?" asked the lady . . . $2,500 for every five minutes," said Jessel . . . "That's out of the question," the lady assured . . . "Well," replied Jessel—who thereby won his way into Palm Beach circles—"Well, Mrs. Whitney, I'll pay you twice as much for half the time—if you'll come over to OUR house and entertain US."

ROMANCE: All last week the newspapers reported that Joan Crawford was coming to New York to see "Oscar Wilde," with her husband as escort . . . Yesterday the papers announced that Franchot didn't accompany her to the show, fearing the publicity . . . "Why didn't you take her anyway?" I asked Franchot later . . . "Well, the real reason I didn't go," he confessed, "is that I've already seen it."

Elman Cheered As He Plays to Help Refugees

Large Audience Hears Brilliant Performance In Constitution Hall

Mischa Elman, who can command four-figured fees for his violin performances when he wants, played for the love of liberty in Constitution Hall last night.

The Elman violin spoke out for refugees and would-be emigrants of Europe's totalitarian lands. It spoke eloquently as Elman, who is donating a cross-country tour's proceeds to the refugee cause, expressed in music his feelings for sufferers across the water. The playing was especially brilliant, even for Elman.

The large Washington audience, which had paid $1, $2 and $3 admissions for the refugees' funds, broke into cheers as Elman came upon the stage.

Elman took the enthusiastic greeting smilingly. He is pleased, as he said afterward, that his cause is receiving such generous response over the country. He is more pleased than if it were all a personal tribute—for the happiness of thousands of sufferers is at stake. He is pleased because the ovation comes from Protestants, Catholics and Jews, and stands for a spirit of tolerance that people in other places cannot know.

"A Common Problem"

"It is so important," he said, "that members of separate religious faiths consider the refugee problem a common one. For it truly is that."

Quiet came. Mischa Elman tucked his violin under his chin and dipped into a heavy program of Handel, Beethoven, Lalo and other masters. A master faithful to his art, he made no effort to inject social significance into his numbers. "I just play the violin, of course," he explained, "But on this tour I am very happy doing it."

The Handel Sonata in D Major was most lyrical music in Elman's hands. And he played Beethoven's Kreutzer Sonata with as much regard for the melody as the technical madness, which is giving this oft-played piece pleasant and unusual treatment. Elman, of course, took it in his usual unworried stride.

Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," the Chopin-Sarasate Nocturne in E flat, the Brahms-Joachim Hungarian Dance and Vieuxtemps' Ballade and Polonaise, and four encores were on the last half of the recital. But Elman played without wearying. His technique was sure. He tossed off the Beethoven and Lalo with ease. His tone was rich and mellow. He played the Chopin Nocturne smoothly enough to satisfy the most sensitive ear.

Elman said that inserting 28 benefit concerts into his season has meant strenuous work. He is now only in the middle of a schedule that will take him throughout the United States. After Easter he goes into the Middle West, and after that he travels the Pacific Coast. It's hard work.

But then he will remember the story someone has reported about a friend in, or just out of, a concentration camp.

"When you realize the suffering some of these people are going through," he said, "I think it's such a privilege to be able to live in this country, and we have to be so grateful for this liberty and freedom here. Whatever we can do for those who haven't got it, we should do."

Carnival Queen Admits Slaying

Laconia, N. H., March 30 (U.P.).—Mrs. Mabel McArthur, 38, Laconia winter carnival queen two years ago, entered police headquarters here late tonight and told Deputy Chief Charles E. Dunleavy that she had fatally shot a man.

The shooting occurred, she told Dunleavy, when the victim, Ben Dow, 40, during a "drunken rage," was smashing furniture in the kitchen of Frank Bean's farmhouse on the outskirts of Laconia, where she made her home. Her questioning was not completed tonight.

141 Inducted Into Press Club At Ceremonies

Group Sworn In By George Stimpson; Notables Speak

With pomp and hilarity, 141 new members of the National Press Club were sworn in last night by Chief Justice Hoosis (better known as George Stimpson, former president of the club), who administered the oath to the initiates en masse on an old copy of the city directory. He was assisted by Ted Wilcox, as town crier.

The ceremonies began with a parade of old and new members through the clubrooms behind the Press Club's Little German Band, whose seven whiskered members, attired in flagrant checks and stripes, oom-pah'd the "March of the Seven Dwarfs" from "Snow White" with roof-lifting gusto.

Leading the group into the ballroom, the band gave way to Arthur Hachten, president of the club, who after greeting the 200 members present turned the microphone over to Fred Perkins and Howard Acton, of the entertainment committee. An elaborate entertainment program followed, interrupted occasionally by eloquent discourses by Perkins, Acton and Ralph H. (Spike) Collins.

Glee Club Performs

The latter, after a lengthy address on the subject of the Blue Ridge Mountains during which his announcement of the annual club outing on May 13 was all but drowned out by insistent applause and boos, was invited to "extend his remarks in the record."

Between the ballads of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Glee Club, Ted Huntley seized the opportunity to announce the formation of a Press Club male choir, under the general supervision of Hachten, Huntley, Acton and Perkins, to be directed by Robert Davidson, director of the telephone company group.

Notables Speak

Noted members of the club were called on after the oath-taking for brief remarks. Those contributing included Senator Green (Democrat), Rhode Island; Townsend (Republican), Delaware; Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico; Austin (Republican), Vermont, and Schwartz (Democrat), Wyoming; and Representatives Parsons (Democrat), Illinois and Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Besides the glee club, the entertainers included Conni Dell, swing singer; John Charles Quigley, baritone; Anne O'Connor, tap dancer, and Bunny Morris, who danced the hula-hula while Quigley sang. Six girls from the Marion Venable studio, Doris Jean Isbell, Fern Alnquist, Dolly Schnettler, Jerry Griffis, Anne O'Connor and Mary Soper, tap-danced a number called "The Hitch Hikers."

American Press Is as Free As the People, White Declares

U. S. Newspapers Reflect Cautious Conservatism of Property-Owners In Face of Changes, Emporia Sage Says

By the United Press.

New York, March 30.—William Allen White, "Sage of Emporia," writing in Collier's magazine, said today "the American press is as free as the American people. Our press has the faults of our people and their saving virtues."

The noted Kansas publisher said the quarrel between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Publisher Frank Ganntt was based on a "confusion of terms" brought about by the machine age.

"The sad part of it is that they are both right and at the same time each is more or less wrong," White said.

"The press, theoretically is as free as it was 50 or 100 years ago. The editor can, if he will, say what he pleases and do what he chooses with his press, but in three generations the American press has become properly affected by the security of its profits. It tends by reason of its heavy investment to be increasingly a monopoly. The one paper town is becoming more and more common. Larger and larger towns tolerate gladly the newspaper monopoly for business reasons."

Newspapers still, White said, are dependent on goodwill.

"If the publisher, merely greedy either for profits or power, thinks he is only merchandising news and advertising service or if he feels that so long as he stands for the pay roll he is free to color the news he sells (which means to peddle poison) he violates his good will and eventually wrecks his property.

"The investing newspaper publisher is only influential so long as the public believes in his integrity. He is on leash to his readers. When his readers leave, his advertisers follow.

White said Ickes was wrong in declaring the freedom of the press is seriously affected by newspaper advertisers.

" . . as a matter of fact the wants of advertisers are few, personal and simple," he said. "If they were given everything they asked, it would not greatly affect the real freedom of the press."

The press, he said, reflected the timidity of change which is characteristic of the middle class.

"The evils of the press reflect the cautious conservatism of a property-owning people in the face of changes they do not quite understand and cannot quite bring themselves to encourage," he said. "But it's a stupid mistake to say that the press is shackled. We are in no great danger of a 'controlled press.'

"The press will follow the widening social sense of the people."

Seccombe Tells Firemen He's Their Friend

He Promises to Back Legislation for Better Apparatus

Representative James Seccombe (Republican), of Ohio, last night promised he would "be in there pitching" for legislation to provide better equipment and improved working conditions for the District Fire Department.

He spoke before 150 Masonic members of the Fire Department at a banquet in the Harrington Hotel in honor of Stephen T. Porter, newly appointed fire chief.

Seccombe, who served as Mayor of Canton, Ohio, from 1932 to 1938, said, "You never know how many enemies policemen and firemen have until you try to cut their hours or get them better equipment. I believe in letting the men themselves choose the apparatus they have to work and fight with."

The legislator told the firefighters, "My heart still pounds when I hear that No. 3 Engine Company race past my hotel."

Among the banquet guests were Deputy Chief Engineer B. W. Weaver, Chiefs L. L. Woolard and H. A. Chapman, Honorary Deputy Chief Henry C. Stein, Deputy Chief P. W. Nicholson, retired, and the Rev. Harold A. Kester, recently appointed chaplain of the department. Lieut. Elmer F. Stein acted as toastmaster.

D. C. Reduces Liability Rates For Taxicabs

New Premiums $16; P. U. C. to Consider Plea for Old Fares

The Public Utilities Commission will meet tomorrow to consider a petition of six taxicab associations requesting a rehearing on the proposed new schedule of rates, otherwise effective Monday.

At the same time, J. Belch Moore, superintendent of insurance, announced a reduction in taxicab liability premiums, effective Sunday. The new premiums will be $16 monthly or $3.75 weekly. The former rates were $25 and $5.

The petition filed by the companies represented approximately 1,184 licensed cabs of the 4,000 in the city, and said the proposed 20-40-60-80-cent rates would result in loss of revenue and cause unemployment.

The new rates would not affect the first zone. It has been contended that there will be few riders outside of this zone.

The new taxicab insurance rates will benefit some 2,500 drivers for a total of $12,500 monthly. Superintendent Moor stated.

I KNOW FOUR ROSES IS ALL WHISKEY AT LEAST 4 YEARS OLD—IS THAT WHY YOU SAY IT'S AMERICA'S FINEST WHISKEY?

AGE IS MIGHTY IMPORTANT, JIM—BUT IT'S ONLY ONE OF 5 REASONS WHY FOUR ROSES IS TOPS!

DO YOU KNOW

1 Aging improves a good whiskey, but it can't make a poor whiskey good. So all the whiskies that go into Four Roses are outstandingly good to start with.

2 All of them are at least 4 years old—old enough to be bottled in bond. And they would be bottled in bond, if we thought they would be as good, sold separately that way.

3 But our 74 years' experience has taught us that the finest whiskey is made by combining several of our whiskies into one whiskey that's finer still.

4 Then we purposely make Four Roses lighter and milder, by reducing it to 90 proof (instead of the stronger 100 proof which bottled-in-bond whiskies must be).

5 Four Roses is ALL whiskey—with the mellowness of age, and the greatness that only generations of distilling skill can give. Compare it with any other whiskey made.

The appointment of Fred H. Brown, former Democratic Senator from New Hampshire, to the long vacant office of Comptroller General follows immediately the passage of a modified reorganization bill shorn of provisions for radical changes in that office. Consequently the announcement from the White House is considered tantamount to an admission that the President has abandoned his fight for a new financial set-up that would have deprived the Comptroller General of his present broad powers of control over expenditures. This conclusion is strengthened by reason of the fact that the post has been awarded to a strong supporter of the New Deal who suffered defeat at the last election.

That does not mean, however, that Mr. Brown is a political appointee lacking in the qualities that would make him a suitable candidate for the important post of Comptroller General. On the contrary, his training as a lawyer and his important administrative experiences should be of great assistance to him when he comes to grapple with the duties and perplexities of his new office.

Mr. Brown's years appear, however, to be a rather serious handicap. This is not because he is too old to serve at 60, but because if he should remain for the full statutory term of 15 years, he would have passed the age when, as the President has emphasized, most men are capable of efficient performance. The probabilities are that he would retire before his term of office ended. But that, too, would be unfortunate, as it is desirable that the position of Comptroller General should be held by a man who has ample time to become fully acquainted with the arduous duties that devolve upon him.

Under any proper merit system of appointment the position of Comptroller General would never be filled by an outsider, who, however able, would necessarily lack the specialized knowledge that the position demands. The incumbent should be someone who has advanced from subordinate positions and has acquainted himself with the duties of the office as he progresses. Moreover, such a system of preferment, assuring promotion on the basis of merit, provides assurance against political abuse of the great discretionary powers lodged in the Comptroller General.

An Issue For Congress

Complaints against the manner in which the Board of Education has handled the Marion Anderson affair are being heard from both the Senate and the House of Representatives. Some members of Congress believe that the board has acted arbitrarily and that the effect of its action is to deny the constitutional rights of the group seeking use of Central High School Auditorium for Miss Anderson's concert. The board, on the other hand, has followed what it understands to be the policy laid down by Congress.

In these circumstances a review of the legislation on which the board's action was based would seem to be fundamental. Both Senator Wagner and Representative McGranery have very definite ideas as to what the policy of the Board of Education should be in this matter. But are their views supported by a majority in Congress? If so, new legislation on the civic use of school buildings is in order. Conversely, if the attitude of the protestants does not reflect the views of the majority, discussion of the issue in Congress would show that complaints against the board are misdirected.

One point is crystal clear. If Congress takes any action it should be in the nature of clarifying the law as to the use of school buildings for noncurricular activities of this kind. An investigation designed merely to put pressure upon the board in this particular case would be indefensible. Senator Wagner assumes that Miss Anderson and her sponsors have a "lawful right" to conduct the proposed concert in the Central High School Auditorium. But he would probably be the first to acknowledge that the responsibility for interpretation of the law does not fall upon himself. That is an obligation of the board to which administration of the schools has been entrusted.

If the board has made a mistake, it is because of lack of clarity in the law itself. Where the law is not specific the board is forced to use its best judgment in making an interpretation. Congress may disagree with some decisions thus reached, but if so remedial action should be addressed to the deficiencies of the law.

Representative McGranery's resolution would be more constructive, therefore, if it called for review of the legislation creating a dual school system in Washington.

In any event the interest of some national legislators in the issue should be welcomed by the local authorities. For if there is to be any basic change in policy, either as to the use of school buildings or as to provision of a suitable auditorium in which major civic events and artistic performances may be held without the difficulties now so apparent, the action must be taken by Congress.

Great Britain Prepares

Great Britain entered the World War in August, 1914. But it was not until January, 1916—17 months later—that the voluntary system of recruitment was replaced by conscription.

For this delay a number of factors were responsible. There was the belief that the war would not be of long duration. British participation, it was thought, would be primarily in the field of naval action and financial and economic contributions to the allied cause. Industry feared the possible effects of conscription on the operation of plants and factories. But most important of all was the deep-rooted aversion of the British people to any system savoring of compulsion.

Now, the conscription issue is again to the fore in Great Britain. The government must confront the possibility of a war with Germany, to be waged this time without any eastern allies. And the necessities of the situation demand preparations on a heretofore unprecedented scale.

The British defense budget for this year is the greatest in peacetime history, involving tremendous expansion of the military as well as of the naval and air establishments. And the alliance with France is being steadily tightened. During President Lebrun's recent visit to London, for instance, Great Britain agreed to come to the aid of France in the event of an attack by the Fascist powers on Switzerland, while France agreed to support Great Britain in defending Belgium and the Netherlands from invasion.

Under the circumstances, it is apparent that the British government cannot limit its projected expeditionary force to the continent to the 100,000 figure that obtained in August, 1914. Nor is it planning to do so. The British Territorial Army, comparable to our National Guard, is to be doubled in size. And in raising this trained reserve to a force of nearly 500,000, voluntary recruitment will be vigorously pushed along the lines of the Derby plan of 1915. Under that plan volunteers are trained in various kinds of war service, but are permanently called from civil life only when their services are absolutely required.

A powerful element in Great Britain feels, however, that all these efforts are still inadequate for the situation and that conscription must be introduced. It is argued that the country must be prepared to exert its maximum strength in the first weeks of any war with the axis powers, and the volunteer idea is further frowned upon because it leaves the "slacker" undisturbed.

For traditional and other reasons, Premier Chamberlain is resisting this pressure. He has given a pledge that his government will not introduce conscription, and he is anxious to keep that pledge. In this he is supported by a very large, if diminishing, section of public opinion.

It is impossible not to sympathize with the prime minister's stand. Yet it is apparent that the anti-conscription element is waging a losing fight. No longer is Great Britain isolated from the continent. No longer is her sea power adequate to insure protection. No longer is it possible to oppose totalitarianism by purely chivalrous methods. And so, with heart-burning and hesitation, the British people are being pushed by Hitler into a system which they have always regarded with abhorrence precisely because it illustrates Hitler's theory that the individual has absolutely no rights which the state is called upon to respect.

Our Speaker Tonight

Many avenues for the advancement of ambitious youth were surveyed by the late Horatio Alger. But memory recalls none of his heroes who showed more shrewdness, and certainly none of them exhibited so keen a sense of humor, as Richard Hugh Richards, said by the police of Colorado Springs to have been, until lately, a cook on an Atlantic liner.

An English accent, a pleasing address and much sangfroid are not imperative characteristics for the making of omelets. But on the lecture platform they are invaluable assets, so invaluable that, for many an audience, nothing additional is needed. Some such conclusion, it appears, passed through the mind of Mr. Richards before he left his ship to become a lecturer on "the European situation." Throughout the Middle West, it is asserted, he cut a swath at least as wide as any other expert in this overworked yet fertile field.

One pictures the adroit young man, tossing the names of foreign ministers as skillfully as flapjacks, treating current boundary changes in terms of rare, medium and well done, predicting the future with the same assurance with which he would prepare a sauce. Indeed the metamorphosis attributed to Mr. Richards seems brilliant largely because it was so natural. Who so competent to discuss Europe as one who is accustomed to handling eggs?

It is not difficult for a cook to speak as authoritatively as any on the European situation. It would be much more of a feat for most lecturers on this subject to pass muster, or even mustard, as a cook.

Two Great Cubans

By the impartial coincidence of fate there died this week two of the foremost figures in the troubled history of the young Cuban Republic—Carlos Manuel de Cespedes and Gerardo Machado y Morales. One was born, the other died, in exile. Therein is explained the fundamental difference in two careers, which in time and other respects ran parallel. Both were born in 1871; both fought in their country's war for independence; both were men of substance; each became President of Cuba. There the parallel ends.

Cespedes was a son of the revolutionary leader in the bloody Ten Years' War against Spain, in the course of which he lost his life. The elder Carlos Manuel was President of the shadowy republic that existed 70 years ago in the hearts of the roving guerrillas who relentlessly dogged Spanish soldiery in the island. Nearly 30 years later his son fought with Maximo Gomez and Calixto Garcia, of the famous message, against the same Martinez Campos whose strategy of conciliation had ended the Ten Years' War.

Later Cespedes was to serve the present republic as its diplomatic representative on three continents, including eight years in Washington, and finally as ambassador to the late Spanish Republic. As secretary of state under Machado he lent his unequaled experience in foreign affairs and the prestige of his unblemished name to the early years of that regime.

When the populace of Havana rose against Machado in 1933 it was Cespedes who was called to the Presidency. But long-pent-up passions were on the loose and his moderation was unable to control their violence, a task finally accomplished by the army sergeant who is now master of Cuba. Patriot, statesman, and patrician gentleman, Cespedes left a heritage of integrity and high mindedness all too rare in the opportunism of Cuban politics.

Following the cynical corruption of the Bayas administration, Gerardo Machado was elected President of Cuba in 1925. He began his term of office under the brightest auspices as "regenerator" of the nation, and for a time justified the hopes of his people by a thoroughgoing program of administrative and economic reforms. But long before his rule was cut short by revolution it had become a dictatorship of terror.

Ruthless repression of all opposition and disregard for the forms of constitutional government, for the national credit and for civil rights, at last brought on the popular uprising, which overthrew Machado. Since that day of reckoning he had wandered abroad, haunted by fear of assassination and unable to return to the land which he had so flagrantly misruled. Yet, the Cuban people, whose nature is forgiving, are likely to remember him as the gallant soldier of 1894 and the good President of 1926, rather than as the callous tyrant of 1932.

Blossom Time

The festal mood of Easter follows full upon the penitential mood of Lent. So too (trusting to the weatherman's promises) let us rejoice that the scowling skies and sorry downpours of the last 36 hours have been only by way of preparation for the opening of the Cherry Blossom Festival today; that the blooms will be all the fresher for yesterday's rain and the sun the more brilliant for his two-day rest.

The Cherry Blossom Festival means much to Washington—as much as the Mardi Gras to New Orleans, and in a way even more. For here earth herself has part in the merrymaking. At the season when "longen folk to go on pilgrimages" should we not be more grateful than ever for the beauty which draws them in tens of thousands to Washington, to leave many and many a dollar behind them when they depart?

But it would be sad if this aspect of the festival, for all its great importance to the community, should make us less disposed to value beauty for its own sake, or if man-made pageantry should divert too much admiration from the carnival of nature.

After all there is no spectacle, not even the crowning of the festival queen, beautiful as she may be, that compares to the spectacle of the trees themselves throughout this all-too-brief period of their flowering. One who sees it often enough, and at the right moments, might even come to understand the passion of the Samurai poet who died so happily under a cherry bough in the moonlight.

At least one can understand the mood of Housman when he wrote:

> Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
> Is hung with bloom along the bough,
> And stands about the woodland ride,
> Wearing white for Eastertide.

Bonds And Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was interesting today the frank way Justice Felix Frankfurter admitted the Supreme Court had been "reconstructed" and that as a result of the "reconstruction in the membership of the Court" there was now "an important shift" in what is constitutional law. In other words for over a century and a quarter the power to tax means what great Chief Justice Marshall declared in McCulloch vs. Maryland and followed in case after case since, including Collector vs. Day, namely that a State cannot tax a Federal function and vice versa.

We've had the New Deal, "dishonestly," as Senator Carter Glass says, repudiating the express promise of the Government in bonds to pay in gold, now the foundation seems laid for it to repudiate its express promise made to induce investors to buy its bonds—to get savers to lend it money—that as a result of the low interest rate the bonds would not be taxable. Just more "redistribution of wealth"—taking from those that have to give to those that have not, without any gadget to make it stay put and to prevent it having to be done all over again all the time.

I do not own a single dollar's worth of Federal or State bonds or any other tax-exempt security. I wish I did. I wish I knew who has all the $25,000,000,000 of Federal bonds that have been issued since FDR closed all the banks the day after he became President and we were so broke. I cannot understand how $25,000,000,000 in bonds could have been absorbed.

"Oppose, Not Appease"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me our President has hit on the proper approach to dictators. "Oppose," not "Appease," the dictators must be the watchword of democracies today if they wish to retain that form of government.

The first step this country must take in that direction is to repeal the present neutrality laws and distinguish between aggressor and victim nations. The second step we should take is to bolster the democracies and all potential victims of the aggressors by encouraging conferences and joint action among such countries to prevent the further expansion of the aggressor nations.

We must act promptly before the democracies in other parts of the world crumble, leaving to us, and possibly the U. S. S. R., the tremendous task of saving what is left of civilization. N. E. S.

Industry And War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to come to the defense of business and industry and enter a vigorous protest against your intimation, as contained in your editorial comments on the Bone bill in the March 24 issue of The Post, that these men would sabotage the Government by refusing to produce supplies in case of war if they were denied the privilege of becoming millionaires overnight through huge profits, while men in other walks of life were giving up their jobs, their freedom, their homes and their lives.

You should apologize to the men engaged in business and industry for branding them as potential traitors in case this country should become engaged in war.

Justifies the WPA Lobby

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Regrettable Incident," is as much to be regretted as the incident itself. You correctly state that "Resort to force is always out of place in legislative halls." And that "Even under strong provocation, those elected to represent the people in Congress ought to be able to control their emotions and their hands." But having thus stated the issue, you proceed to direct the rest of the editorial to an attack upon the victim of this inexcusable aggression.

Thus you find that Representative Cox had good reason to be resentful because some of his constituents called upon him to consider the consequence of a slash in the WPA appropriation. But you cannot appreciate the dignity and self-restraint of the humble WPA worker who surely has more reason to feel resentment when his supposed Representative in Congress, who lives comfortably on a salary of $10,000 per year, shows callous disregard for the families who would be deprived of a job that pays them a wage of $26 per month.

You speak with approval of Congressmen who are inclined to react as did Representative Cox, who draws the $10,000 per annum, and with approbation of his $26 per month constituents whom you describe as "drawing substantial benefits from the Federal Treasury."

You take advantage of the restrained and dignified statement issued by the Workers Alliance, not in order to commend them for refraining from answering in kind, but to make it appear that they realize they have something to apologize for.

Both the action of Representative Cox and your editorial reflect contempt for the humble citizens of our Nation. Both reflect an arrogance which has been characteristic of the so-called aristocrats and and which liberty-loving people have properly resented and opposed as inimical to democracy.

Your editorial is all the more dangerous because it not only condones and offers extenuation for an act of violence by a public servant against the people whom he is supposed to serve, but because you advocate limitations upon the democratic rights of the people which would extend to the entire country the shameful condition of disfranchisement which exists in the district represented by Mr. Cox and in many other sections of the South.

This your editorial does by stigmatizing as "impertinent" lobbying activities on the part of WPA workers which are accepted and considered proper when representatives of large corporations and other groups of the population engage in them. We feel sure that neither Representative Cox nor the editor of The Post would approve if a Congressman who represented labor were to use violence against a lobbyist of the American Manufacturers Association.

Aiding Mass Murder

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of March 20, you quoted Senator Borah's statement relative to "embargoes" in the present world crisis that, "We will not contribute to mass murder."

It is regrettable that the Senator has forgotten so soon the request by the Chinese Society of Oregon recently made to Senator McNary to stop the export of scrap iron from the West Coast to Japan—which has already carried out this contribution.

That 53 Per Cent

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an employer of labor, with numerous actual cases under scrutiny, Benjamin F. Stickney's contentions about 53 per cent polls interested me.

Now I am no industrial royalist (despite the confession that I've had my fill of New Dealism after voting for it in 1932). I've had to go deeply into debt to carry on and whether I graduate to a park bench or condition of decent subsistence may depend upon the next whim of the New Deal or sudden deviation from its recent sane stand to remove harassment from business.

What accounts for the 53 per cent pro-New Deal poll instead of some figure under 50 per cent? The recent national defense razzle-dazzle is used as a cover for six years of abysmal failure.

If you took a poll of the park benches the result would doubly cheer New Dealers. They'd find the bums and constitutionally adverse to work (politically elevated to a "forgotten man" status for the first time by political benevolence) 90 per cent New Deal. You might even hear, logically: "The whole Southwest is on relief. They've got to, not wanting work. They consider it a right. If they don't get relief they'll raise hell. Their sense of gratitude is nil and they don't give a damn where it comes from, but hooray for the New Deal!"

But often a hopeful note, a sign of wakening, pierces such pessimism; a protest against the six years' fumbling and bungling, the wasted time, the endless alibis. Then you know you're talking to a taxpayer, not one of the beneficiaries whose numbers account for at least one-fourth of that 53 per cent total.

Polls or no polls, seldom will you find a farmer or former farmer who wants to see the New Deal continued. I know a lot of farmers. As for myself, I ask you, my friends who use their skulls, how would the New Deal that I mistakenly voted for have got by to date without the social security fund?

Individual Strength

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "In union there is strength."

"Come ye out from amongst them and be ye separate."

A couple of nice conflicting proverbs. One of our modern methods when in a jam is to quote a proverb. It is easy to follow and lean on when thought and logic require some concentrated effort.

"In union there is strength." Granted! Can you eat it? Will it clothe your family and yourself? Will it guarantee happiness?

Real strength, strength in freedom, which we are all struggling for, can be gained only by the individual through the individual's lone efforts. All organizations in the world, whether unions, churches, fraternal organizations or what-not, exploit the individual and are just so many more chains.

So why jump from one frying pan into another? Why not just sizzle in the pan we are in until through each individual's own efforts he is able to cut loose those chains, one by one, and one day be able to reach up and extract himself completely.

This is the only solution. This is the only freedom.

Answering Questions

NOT SO LONG AGO a retired justice of the United States Supreme Court told me, "reporters and correspondments have the right to ask the questions they do, but I have the right to keep still and not answer them." He said it courteously, but with firmness.

The conclusion seemed to have shaped itself in his mind some time before, and I thought at first he shared it with me to prove further a magnanimity that he had sought to indicate by his willingness to receive me. So that it was not until later that the full significance of his remark came home to me. Here had been, incredible as it may be, a man who had it within his power to refuse to answer questions, whereas the rest of us are under the compulsion of answering them 24 hours a day and all of our lives.

The justice may have brought up the matter because I was a reporter and by definition an asker of questions. It made the whole thing more decisive, at least for a man who had grown up in his particular period. This was a period in which persons who asked a great many questions were thought impertinent and undesirable. So that reporters were a special class which respectable members of society did not ordinarily "know."

Instead, such persons as found regular relationship with the press unavoidable formed a special technique for dealing with them, just as they followed a thoughtful regimen as a protection against grippe or influenza. And a man who could sit blandly and politely—and silently—while the questions of a news gatherer beat against his skull was recognized as a man in a million.

But although there may have been some vestige of that earlier attitude in the jurist's mind, I am inclined to think there was even more that was up to date and currently significant. He hadn't been retired very long and was a man who by habit kept himself informed. He knew how many questions other Americans have to answer, and it may have occurred to him that in these days a newspaper reporter is tongue-tied in comparison with agents of the Government and the courts.

It might even be thought that he chose to discourse on reporters to make me think well of myself. I was, he seemed to say, a man who could ask questions if I would, but was not the sort of scourge who insisted, or could insist, that they be answered. Although this fancy did not obscure the stronger impression, which was that even if I were that kind of inquisitor I could not exercise my power on him.

It is this last aspect that led me finally to believe that the justice had occupied some of his leisure since his retirement in critical appraisement of the present scheme of things, giving thanks that he was still in a position to disregard questions. He must have noticed, now that he was not overwhelmed by the steady pressure of court business, that the art of cross-examination was not confined to reporters or lawyers or even judges. And of all questioners, he may have concluded, reporters are the least obnoxious or oppressive.

Compare reporters, for example, with the examiners of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, with the agents of the Bureau of the Census, with the endless curiosity of public and private employers, with life insurance agents, with the Department of Justice. Consider the vast curiosity of examiners for Congressional committees and for the independent governmental agencies which are charged with finding out all about businesses and individuals, and telling them how wrong they have been about everything.

Even if you disregard the diurnal inquisitiveness of the polls of public opinion that are conducted by private organizations, the questionnaires from advertising agencies, and from broadcasting companies, the "sampling" of this or that section of the populace that goes on by telephone, telegram, mail, and personal visitation, you find today that the newspaper reporter is a very amenable fellow. And he is one with whom it is reasonable to share your personal satisfaction at being set free from having to accede in the slightest degree to the curiosity of anybody, through the fortunate device of having been appointed to the United States Supreme Court.

The dark abysm in which the rest of us find ourselves was not discussed. The main thing was that here was a man who didn't have to answer questions—either mine, or anyone else's. Except, possibly—well, he WAS married.

A Different Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to The Post's cartoon and editorial of March 24 on "Selling WPA Jobs," I believe both The Post and its readers will be interested in the following editorial from the Brooklyn Eagle of March 23:

"Arrests in WPA Job Fraud.

"Lieut. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, WPA administrator for New York, is to be congratulated on his successful move to break up an alleged plot to sell jobs as guards at WPA headquarters in Manhattan.

"Federal agents have arrested two Brooklyn men on charges of violating a law making it a criminal offense for a Government employe to obtain money for a job. A warrant has been issued for a third man—Charles G. Smith, a former prohibition agent and chief of the guards in the WPA here—on the same charge, but the authorities have thus far been unable to locate him.

"The local WPA organization has been noteworthy for its freedom from scandal. The prompt and vigorous action of Col. Somervell, with the active co-operation of United States Attorney Cahill, is most reassuring."

This editorial will give the readers of The Post an opportunity to learn of the existence of a different point of view from that expressed by the editor of The Post.

Reporters' Conduct

FOR THE FIRST time in the long and sometimes acrimonious attempt of the present Government to discredit, if not destroy, the American press, the conduct of reporters has been called into question, the accuser being Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee on un-American Activities. Hitherto only the publishers have been accused, generally on a charge of distortion, suppression or false emphasis in the interests of their political beliefs and of the advertisers from whom they receive part of their income. Dies distinctly says that not all the reporters who covered his committee were guilty of the conduct or attitude of which he complains in some.

But he frankly resents jeers, sneers and audible contemptuous comments on the part of individuals from whom newspaper readers received accounts and impressions of the hearings. He says some reporters revealed hostility in a manner that amounted to heckling of witnesses who testified as to activities of Communists and "fellow travelers," and even of the committee itself.

Sacrificed Decorum To Avoid Comment

WASHINGTON reporters covering committee hearings enjoy privileges beyond those of reporters in the courts, but the chair always has authority to enforce order and protect witnesses. Thus Dies, by his complaint, adds weight to the charge that he did not conduct his hearings in a competent manner. In failing to preserve order, even at the necessity of ejecting individuals from the room, he sacrificed decorum to avoid even more bitter newspaper comment. He would have been fiercely ridiculed for doing this, but on the other hand he certainly would have won respect, for, if his own accounts of certain incidents are not exaggerated, the committee was held in contempt and made to like it.

The reporters of Washington are not united on any political front or even as a craft, and if Dies had rebuked unseemly conduct he doubtless would have found objective reporters to state the facts of the case for the public to judge. In the absence of any positive move on his part, however, the heckling by some journalists escaped mention in the papers because by tradition the side comments and conduct of reporters are not news.

The Straight News Crowds Out Color

THE VOLUME of straight news in Washington is so great that descriptive or atmospheric reporting seldom finds room, and reporters never regard their own kind as figures in the picture. In this case apparently tradition rather than a purpose to conceal was responsible for failure to report an important phase of the hearings. By courageous action, Dies could have jogged the press table out of this tradition, and he has himself to blame for not doing so. This failure is the more important because of Dies' resentful feeling that his committee did get a very bad and unfair press in some respects. The Shirley Temple distortion still rankles, although in the end, the committee emerged with the victory and those who took liberties with the true meaning of the testimony, in a clumsy attempt at humorous propaganda, only smeared themselves.

Dies is at odds with the Administration and his grievance against individual journalists is no part of the Administration's war against the press as a whole. But anyone who finds himself arrayed by circumstances against the Administration or the C. I. O. is sure to be attacked by individuals who are regarded as New Deal or C. I. O. journalists with a mission to fight opponents of the New Deal and the C. I. O, and it will be remembered that some testimony concerned Communists in both the New Deal and the C. I. O.

Public Interest Was Misjudged

THE MAIN FAULT of the press seems to have been that some executives and reporters, both, misjudged the public interest in the Dies committee and, in some cases, precondemned everything that the committee might do, on the basis of a low opinion of Dies' ability. Some approached the story with the conviction that it was a farce and were embarrassed to discover that the country thought otherwise and wouldn't be satisfied with light or heavy attempts at humor, which, incidentally, is not a specialty of Washington journalism. Dies, however, studied his subject and his mistakes of procedure and is now more confident of himself and more determined than ever.

If next time he should find the nerve to eject disturbers who abuse their press privileges to hamper the work of a Congressional committee, objective reporters among the many will have no choice but to give honest accounts of the incidents.

India On The Move

Significant Economic Changes

Special correspondence of The Post

London.

THE SCANTY REFERENCES to Indian affairs which appear in the British press are largely confined to political developments. Little attention is paid to one aspect of the new India which vitally concerns this country—the economic revolution.

In India, as in other parts of the world, political and economic changes go hand in hand and interact upon each other, so that it is difficult to disentangle causes from effects. The Swaraj movement in politics stimulated the growth of economic nationalism; on the other hand, economic self-interest contributed considerably to the zeal with which many Indian industrialists supported the activities of Congress. A point may come—perhaps it has come already, with the re-election of Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose, representing the Left Wing element as president of the Congress Party—when the Indian business community will have to face up to two equally unpleasant alternatives.

They may have to choose between continued support of a Congress Party which is moving rapidly toward socialism or veering around toward the moderate parties, who are anxious to preserve the British connection—with a possible loss of some of the protection they now enjoy from foreign, including British, competition.

In other words, they may have to choose between the Devil of Socialism and the Deep Sea of "Imperialism."

Britain's Indian Market Dwindles

MEANWHILE from the British point of view a few salient facts have become clear. Some of these facts Lancashire has already discovered to her cost; some will shortly force themselves upon the attention of other sections of British industry.

The first of these facts is that India, which up to two years ago was the greatest market for British goods, has now fallen to third place. At the beginning of this century, for example, there were in India 195 mills with 42,000 looms and about 5,000,000 spindles. By April, 1937, there were 370 mills, 190,468 looms and 9,250,000 spindles.

Indian imports of cotton piece goods, which before the war averaged about 2,617,000,000 yards per annum, declined in the year ended March, 1938, to 591,000,000. Great Britain's share in this trade has fallen from about 97 per cent before the war to 45 per cent in 1937-38, while Japan's share has increased from 0.1 per cent to 52 per cent over the same period.

Industrialization Already Under Way

The position with regard to cotton is too well known to require further emphasis, but what is not so well known is that the same process is at work in the case of other industries such as jute, iron and steel, cement, sugar refining, and so on. Further, it was decided a few months ago by the Indian provincial governments that, in order to facilitate rapid and comprehensive progress in the development of Indian industries, an All-India Planning Committee should be set up to investigate the possibility of manufacturing in India machinery, plant and tools of all kinds, chemicals, electrical plant, and in fact to work out for application to India something equivalent to the Russian First Five Year Plan. The significance of this last development from the British standpoint will be realized when we consider that practically the only branch of British exports to India which have substantially increased in recent years is machinery and millwork.

Finally, it may be mentioned that in spite of the fact that 90 per cent of her population are agriculturalists, India now ranks among the eight chief industrial countries of the world.

What is behind all this? Various reasons are put forward, such as Japanese competition, political animosity toward Great Britain, the low wages and standards of living of Indian labor and so forth. There is a measure of truth in each of these suggestions. It is true that the low wages of Japanese labor, combined with the high standard of Japanese education and a very high degree of business efficiency, enables Japan to undercut not only British but Indian prices in the Indian market.

It is also true that since India obtained control over her own fiscal system after the reforms of 1919 political feeling has played some part in the erection of trade barriers against foreign manufactured goods. But the fundamental reason for the growing industrialization of India—a phenomenon first apparent in Japan and which is now spreading to all parts of the Far East far deeper than that.

The fact is that among British exports to India during the last 150 years there were two important items which have never figured in any trade returns—British notions of freedom and self-government and British ideas of material well-being and how to attain it. For centuries the Indian masses have acquiesced in a condition of appalling poverty, disease and ignorance, which they regarded as the will of Providence. Now they have woken up—or rather the 10 per cent of literate Indians who are their leaders are waking them up—to the fact that, given ambition and some personal exertion, it is possible for them to live and not merely to exist.

Further, the coming into power of Indian governments in the provinces has opened the way to the achievement of a higher standard of living for the masses. How long it will take, and what measure of improvement is possible, no one would be so foolish as to forecast. But one thing is certain. It can only be done on the basis of industrialization.

The population of the Indian subcontinent is likely in 1941 to be at least 400,000,000. In European countries the maximum number of people who can be maintained on agricultural land is 250 to the square mile; in India large agricultural districts carry over 600 to the square mile. A good deal can be done by improving agricultural methods, but a permanent solution can only be found, as Britain discovered in the nineteenth century, by industrialization.

FROM A SHORT-TERM point of view this involves a loss of British markets or a radical alteration in the character of British exports.

From the long-term point of view it is only by raising the standard of living among the myriads of Eastern peoples that the balance of economic forces as between East and West can be permanently stabilized.

Sulfapyridine Pneumonia Tests Are Hailed Here

Controlled experiments in the treatment of 43 cases of pneumonia with sulfapyridine at Children's Hospital have yielded remarkably positive results, it was announced yesterday by the pneumonia committee of the hospital.

Forty-three children receiving the treatment returned to normal temperature in 24 to 48 hours, the report stated. These were the first children in Washington to receive such treatment. A group of 15 not administered the sulfapyridine was slower in regaining normal temperature.

Mother Chooses Donald Roy as Name for Baby

It's a new baby boy at the Jerome C. Scoolers, 4812 Forty-third place northwest—and the name will be Donald Roy.

Both Donald and Roy were on the list of "plain and simple" names sent to Mrs. Scooler at her request last week by The Post's library.

Mrs. Del H. Freitag, 2747 Woodley place, who requested "unusual and long" names from The Post yesterday had not decided what the boy (or girl) will be called.

The Fabulous Mr. Garner

By Ernest K. Lindley

Some Myths Dispelled

PRESIDENTIAL booms breed fabulous tales. In recent months no stories have been more engrossing than those about the wizardry of John N. Garner.

There was the tale that John N. Garner had solved one of the most persistent problems of the occupant of the White House: How to make grass grow on the heavily shaded front lawn. A homely reminder that Mr. Garner's knowledge of agriculture is not limited to Angora goats, chickens and cactus, and that the Sage of Uvalde knows more about practical matters than the President, the Secretary of Agriculture, and all the brain-trusters rolled into one!

The truth seems to be that the promising stand of grass on the White House lawn was born and is being nurtured without any assistance whatsoever from Mr. Garner, and is solely the product of the long arm of Federal bureaucracy, reaching out through the National Park Service. Nevertheless, such is the hardiness of a pretty fable that at the Democratic National Convention of 1940 Cactus Jack probably will be recommended as the man who can make grass grow anywhere (except, of course, in the city streets).

A second, and more intriguing tale, about Mr. Garner, is that by dint of a little horse-sense he has solved the housing problem. Some time ago the word began to be wafted from Uvalde that Mr. Garner, with his own hard cash, was conducting a "housing experiment." About two months ago I became interested enough to make some inquiries at his office. The information given to me boiled down to the fact that Mr. Garner had built some cheap houses on vacant lots which he owned in Uvalde, and was renting them profitably. This seemed quite sensible, and worthy of notice, too, since if Jack Garner finds it profitable to build houses and rent them, other hard-headed people may be encouraged to invest their capital similarly.

A Few Facts Cited On Garner Cottages

NOTHING that I learned led me to suspect that Mr. Garner had discovered anything new about housing. Uvalde is a long way off, however, and time also can do its part. The Garner "housing experiment" is now being described verbally and in print as something which makes all the Government agencies and experts look silly.

Recently one of my colleagues wrote, a trifle breathlessly, that Mr. Garner had built 17 houses at an average of $1,500 per house, as against $2,700 for a "Government FHA house," that Mr. Garner's houses were in the center of town, while the FHA house was "a mile and a half out of town," and that Mr. Garner's houses rented for $10 to $15 per month, while the FHA house rents for $27.50.

There were other figures and "facts" in the column, but I won't repeat them because, like most of those cited in the preceding paragraph, they were, I am informed, all wrong.

In the first place, the FHA—the Federal Housing Administration—doesn't build homes. It insures mortgages on homes built with private capital. It devotes some effort to encouraging private contractors and building supply companies to show what can be done in the way of home-building. Two FHA demonstration homes have been built in Uvalde. According to my information, which comes from one of the builders, one of these houses cost $3,255 and the other $3,600, including garages, sidewalks, approach walks, gravel drives, grading and, for one house, landscaping. Both are in the best residential district of Uvalde—not one and a half miles outside, but one and two blocks, respectively, from the Uvalde High School.

Mr. Garner's houses are also downtown. Some have garages and some don't. At the present time a local builder is duplicating one of Mr. Garner's most expensive houses for a contract price of $1,531.35. This same builder built one of the two FHA houses for a little more than twice that sum.

Might Be Good Idea To Imitate Garner

BUT HERE are some of the differences: The FHA house has half again as much floor space. It has the best grade of shingles manufactured, while the "Garner cottage" has the cheapest grade manufactured. It has termite shields, whereas the "Garner cottage" hasn't. It has oak flooring laid over felt and a subfloor, whereas the "Garner cottage" has pine flooring without a subfloor. The FHA house has three coats of paint, and two on the roof; the "Garner cottage" has two coats of paint, and none on the roof. The other specifications, inside and out, vary to about the same degree.

Mr. Garner charges $20 a month rent for his most expensive cottage. But for $16.80 a month, plus $8 a month for taxes and insurance—or $24.80 a month—you can buy, in 25 years, the more commodious and much better-built FHA house, including land, garage, sidewalks and other trimmings. A citizen of Uvalde is buying it on those terms now, and another citizen of Uvalde is buying the other FHA house with a little higher monthly payment.

It is quite believable that, as has been widely published, Jack Garner is getting 15 per cent on his housing investment. The joke, it seems to me, is not on the Government, nor on the people who rent his houses—although they might get more for their money if they put up a few extra dollars and bought, on easy terms, an FHA-approved house. It seems to be on the people who are sitting tight on their capital instead of imitating John N. Garner.

The Franco Victory

OF ALL the events that have happened in Europe in the last months, it is the belief of this column that the victory of Gen. Franco in Spain will turn out to be the most critical event for Great Britain, France and, eventually, by way of South America, for the United States.

There have been several views on Spain. There is the predominant Catholic view—held by almost all Catholics all over the world, although there have been minority opinions even inside the Roman Catholic Church. The Catholic view has presented the war in Spain as essentially a struggle between religion and atheism, and between an orderly Catholic social order and communism.

Liberal thought has tended to regard the struggle as between democracy and fascism, with Spainish Communists and other radical groups supporting a left wing republic, and with the outrages against the church as temporary aberrations of a revolutionary situation.

Conservatives have considered Gen. Franco as a protector of private property, and Spanish industrialists have given Franco support for this reason.

Power Politics In Background

BACK OF IT ALL, however, has loomed the question of power politics.

Russia's interest in Spain has indicated that Stalin has not completely abandoned the idea of Soviet Russia as the instrument of the world Communist revolution.

Russia, as a nation, and not as the center of the world Communist movement, has only a remote interest in Spain. There are no vital Russian interests on the Mediterranean.

Russia, as a nation, however—as any nation, whether under a czar or under a Communist dictator, or with any other form of social and political organization—is and would be anxious not to see the economic and political power of Germany increased as long as Germany has open designs on Russian territory.

Great Britain and France, and particularly Great Britain, have taken the official view that the war in Spain was a social struggle, that its outcome was no concern of theirs and that when it was over they would come to terms with whoever was victor.

The British confidence that this could be done has rested on the perennial British confidence in the power of money. The conservative government has argued that when Franco had won he would be in a bad way financially and could then be made amenable to British and French policy by generous loans.

Blind To Facts About Fascintern

THE BRITISH and French have also counted on the desperate elements inside the Franco front; they have hoped for the eventual defeat of the phalangists before the more conservative elements in Franco's ranks, and they have argued that a strongly Nationalist Spain would immediately get rid of foreign influence once it had consolidated its domestic power.

This viewpoint has always seemed to this column not to take into account the revolutionary nature of international fascism, and the fact that the Fascintern is now consolidated into a movement with a world policy, directed from Berlin, as the Comintern is directed from Moscow.

Hypnotized by the fear of the Comintern, British and French public leaders have most obstinately refused to see the facts about the Fascintern.

Meanwhile, the Comintern gets nowhere, and the Fascintern takes strategic point after strategic point.

It is entirely possible that every Italian soldier may leave Spain, but it is extremely probable that Spain will join the Berlin-Rome axis.

The weight of the axis is in Germany, and Mussolini himself is, since the conquest of Austria, taking his directions from there. It is the belief of this column—a belief in which I hope I shall be disappointed and proved wrong—that Gen. Franco will take HIS directions from there.

THE GERMAN penetration in Spain is much less conspicuous than the Italian and much more important. Germany penetrates not by way of armed divisions but by commercial agents who are at the same time political commissars.

The German interest in Spain is, in the first line, economic. In the second line, it is collaborating with Italy there for military and strategic reasons.

The Germans have already obtained—and obtained in a very inconspicuous way—control over the most vital resources of the country. Their organization power, which is extremely efficient, is likely to hold these resources and even be of considerable value to Gen. Franco. For Germany will guarantee a market, and though she pays in kind she will be able to pay with things that Spain needs, even if some of the things are goods that she has bartered for in other countries and dumps in Spain below cost in return for Spanish ores and other raw materials.

The theory that money will always beat this system is not borne out either in logic or in experience. This system works, and the sooner the world realizes that it does work and is not economic nonsense the better off the world will be.

The idea that the present regimes of Germany and Italy, neither of which has shown any fiery enthusiasm for the church, are in Spain as defenders of the faith cannot seriously be entertained.

Washington Warned Of Foreign Favors

ONE RECALLS the farewell address of George Washington—which is seldom quoted in its complete context—which said:

". . . It is folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another. . . . It must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character; by such acceptance it may place itself in the condition of having given equivalents for nominal favors, and yet of being reproached with ingratitude for not giving more. There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate on real favors from nation to nation. It is an illusion which experience must cure, and which a just pride ought to discard."

Franco has received enormous favors from Italy and Germany—without them he would not have won this civil war, or certainly not by now. He is infinitely weaker than they are, and the idea that he can accomplish what neither France nor Britain is willing to undertake seems to me to be plain wishful thinking.

This will affect us in the United States, directly and indirectly. It will affect us directly because the orbit of the German economic system will be importantly extended. The amount of the globe whose commerce is controlled by totalitarian powers—under a system incompatible with any measure of free economy and under a system with which it is extremely difficult for any other system of commerce to compete—is already imposing.

Furthermore, the distribution of American capital compels a certain amount of collaboration with this system at the cost of other American commercial interests.

FOR INSTANCE, the German Opal automobile is successfully competing with American cars in South America, although the Opal car is manufactured in Germany by General Motors, who purchased a controlling interest in the Opal works under the German republic. The profits from the sale of this car are not allowed to return to the United States, but must remain and be reinvested in Germany.

Similarly, Rumanian oil is not owned by Rumanians nor by Germans, but by Standard Oil, Royal Dutch, and British Shell. This does not mean, however, that these interests will be free under all political conditions to export oil as they please. They will have to operate in conformity with the new German-Rumanian treaty, and this will simply mean that American, Dutch and British capital will be helping to finance the economies of the dictatorships against which France, Great Britain and the United States are arming for defense.

In this sense—and in a great many others—we are arming the dictatorships, and they are certainly not in any sense arming us in return.

Indirectly, the outcome in Spain will have an enormous influence in South America, and this influence will not only be spread by commercial and propaganda agents of Gen. Franco but by commercial, propaganda and diplomatic agents of Germany, Italy and Japan, and it will be anti-United States.

Military Power Combine Stressed

AGAINST this system the liberal democratic world has no adequate defense. It can build all the airplanes that it likes, its defenses are still inadequate. For it is not facing merely a combination of prodigious military power, which conceivably could be overweighed, but it is facing the most effective revolutionary technique that has ever yet been devised in history—the TOTAL revolution, pushed forward not by classes but by whole nations, controlling every military, economic and mental resource; with every embassy and consulate, every commercial office, every separate businessman, acting as an agent for the nation, the combination of nations, and the revolution.

If conservatives would imagine for a moment that Germany had become Communist instead of Fascist, and had won the whole nation to communism and was in combination with three other communistic nations situated in the most strategical positions amongst the continents of the globe, they might perhaps wake up to the fact that there is a menace to liberal democracy wherever it may still be alive and hopeful.

36 Universities Represented As Students' Congress Opens

Leading collegiate debaters from all sections of the country gathered yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel as the first annual National Students' Congress of the Delta Sigma Rho Fraternity convened.

Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, addressed the opening session, and spoke on "Streamlining Democracy."

The 150 delegates, representing 36 universities, pattern their meetings after the United States Senate, and at the current session four subjects are under discussion. They are: National defense, the national labor relations act, the neutrality policy and monopolies.

Divided into four "Senate committees" the students present their views and bring their finished bills to the general assembly which meets today and tomorrow, and votes on the proposed legislation exactly as the lawmakers of the Nation.

Guests of honor at last night's banquet included: Senators Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana; Prentiss Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, and Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Laborite), of Minnesota.

Millard Roberts, University of Syracuse student, was elected "Speaker of the Senate" for the meeting and Miss Phoebe Beall, of George Washingon University, was named Senate secretary.

Other local students, all of whom have been members of their varsity debating teams for at least two years and who have maintained a B average throughout their college careers are Miss Muriel Merelman, George Washington; John Southmayd, George Washington; Charles Corker, George Washington, and Charles Stewart, American University.

Overton Plan Indorsed by 4 Senators

Favorable Report Seen for Proposal To Stabilize U. S. Payments to D. C.

The Overton formula for stabilizing Federal payments to the District on a land ratio basis was given to the Senate District Committee yesterday with the unanimous indorsement of four members of a special sub-committee.

While the bill, sponsored by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, is likely to have rougher sailing in the full committee, the weight of the sub-committee's indorsement is expected to get it to the Senate floor with a favorable report.

Public hearings on the measure were closed with a detailed analysis of the per capita tax burden of Washington taxpayers, as compared with 11 cities of similar size. The analysis was presented by C. E. Richtor, of the Census Bureau.

Commissioners Approve

Commissioners Hazen and McCoach indorsed the measure, and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan was given permission to insert a statement in the record.

Richtor's testimony was offered to contradict the general contention of members of Congress, especially in the House, that District taxes are far under the average of cities of like size. The local tax rate is the basis of the principal arguments against any increase in the Federal payment.

Overton's formula is based on a ratio of the Federal-owned land, including half the park areas, to the total acreage of the District. Applied to the general fund estimates in the 1940 District supply bill now before a House sub-committee, the formula would provide approximately $8,000,000 instead of $5,000,000.

Richtor's analysis of the per capita tax burden shows the District is sixth among the 12 cities examined by the Census Bureau. It pointed out that the Capital is an easy first in the amount of tax-exempt Federal property.

Without taking into account State taxes, the per capita tax is highest in Boston with $92.50, Richtor said, and lowest in St. Louis with $44.29. Washington's per capita tax burden is $59.82.

Third in Operation Cost

When all forms of municipal revenue are counted, however, Newark takes first place with $106.03, while St. Louis remains lowest with $52.68 and Washington stays in sixth place but jumps in per capita expenditures to $85.14.

Breaking down the per capita costs of operating the cities under examination, Richtor reported that Washington is third. The cost of maintaining general departments, he said, ranges from $76.17 per capita for Buffalo to $26.68 for New Orleans. Washington's cost is $71.14.

The District has the highest costs of operation of hospitals and correctional institutions.

As for the proportion of real estate taxes to the general tax burden, Washington stands ninth with 83.3 per cent of its general property revenue coming from this source.

Richtor warned against using the tax rate as an index of the tax burden of a city. It often, he added, is unreliable in this respect.

Boys and girls of Anacostia High School last night played host on the "Students' Radio Workshop" show, bringing to the air the ninth in a series of radio programs, presented each week by undergraduates of the ten senior high schools in the District of Columbia, under the sponsorship of Station WJSV and The Washington Post and with the co-operation of the D. C. Board of Education.

Broadcast from the Anacostia school's auditorium, last night's variety program featured almost everything in the way of entertainment from classical music to ventriloquism.

The program opened with the traditional song of Anacostia High School, sung and played by the school band and chorus, to the tune of Bigelow's "Our Director." The school orchestra played Schubert's "March Militaire." Two sisters, Gloria and Betty Berger, gave their vocal interpretation to "The Prayer Perfect," by Oley Speaks. Stephen Foster's familiar "I Dream of Jeanie" was sung by the school's choral group, the blended voices of 44 boys and girls.

Follower of Bergen

Charles Fowler contributed a Bergen-McCarthy act, discussing current extra-curricular activities at Anacostia with "Ikey McGregor," his suitcase protege.

Climactic musical selection of the show was the "Pilgrims' Chorus," from Wagner's "Tannhauser," with the school band and choral group.

Brief talks, a regular feature of each "Students' Radio Workshop" broadcast, were given by Catherine Ritchie, Anacostia senior, and by Mr. Malcolm Turpin, of the school's commercial department.

The program was produced under the supervision of Mrs. O. H. Corkery, assistant principal of Anacostia High School, with musical selections under the direction of Miss Eva Henderson, choral director, and Mr. Vladimir Vasa, instrumental director.

Next week's "Students' Radio Workshop" program—tenth in the current series—will be heard over Station WJSV Saturday evening, April 8, at 7 o'clock, presented by undergraduates of the Cardozo High School.

Members of the Anacostia Band and Orchestra, participating in last night's broadcast, were:

Catherine Ritchie's Talk

Below is a transcript of the talk on "The Location of the Municipal Auditorium," given by Catherine Ritchie, senior at Anacostia High School, on last night's "Students' Radio Workshop" program, heard over Station WJSV.

One hundred and fifty years ago Pierre L'Enfant and George Washington drew a map which showed how they expected the Capital City to develop and expand toward the eastward plateau from the United States Capitol. This is evidenced further by the fact that the Capitol Building faces east. They had no idea that the city would spread toward the old port of Georgetown.

At the present time many people feel that the development of the eastern section is necessary if we wish to maintain a proper balance in the growth of our city.

In this section we already have hundreds of new homes, apartment houses and what is probably the finest school in the city. But the Federal Government has not honored this section with a public building.

Ground Cheaper

The proposed municipal auditorium should be in the eastern section for several reasons, namely, because the ground is much cheaper. Land can be obtained in this section for about 50 cents a foot—and in the downtown section it would cost as much as $50 a foot.

Moreover, in the already crowded section, the parking space is very limited. A location in the eastern section would have a minimum of six acres for automobile parking, which would care for as many as 1,633 autos. This would allow space for aisles, so that any auto could be parked or unparked without moving any other vehicle.

Finally, in the crowded section, there is no room for expansion, because this would interfere with Federal plans for Government buildings. In the eastern section, this conflict would not arise.

Reflect for a moment on this point: No good government neglects the welfare of one group of people by giving undue aid to another group. Is it not true that no city government should permit one section to feel that it has been overlooked, while the remainder of the city has advanced?

Malcolm Turpin's Talk

Below is a transcript of the talk on "School Banking," given by Mr. Malcolm Turpin, of Anacostia High School's commercial department, on last night's "Students' Radio Workshop" program, heard over Station WJSV.

In our modern life, money and banking play a tremendously large part, and it is in this spirit that the wide-awake high school student is taught the fundamentals of banking today.

The high school promotes good management and citizenship by encouraging students to save regularly for some special purpose, such as vacation, Christmas, or for graduation expenses.

Let's take an example. If a student will deposit 25 cents regularly in the high school bank; he will have in the neighborhood of $65 at the end of his high school career. This tidy sum can be utilized toward building up a fund for further education.

25 Million Deposited

Each member of the Anacostia High School bank staff is chosen on the basis of scholarship and character and, naturally, is a person who is loyal, trustworthy and dependable. He gains experience similar to that which he would receive as a paying and receiving teller in a national or State bank, and is given an opportunity to learn the following regular banking procedures: Writing checks, proving the cash, working on the general books, reconciling bank statements, operating the bank bookkeeping machine, making monthly financial statements and typing and filing bank records.

Perchance the time may come, by reason of necessity for financial training, when many more schools of the country will see the importance of including in their curriculum courses in banking and finance.

After the depression had gained momentum and had begun to rear its scrawny head, the students withdrew not only their deposits of 1931 and 1932, but $5,000,000 additional which had been saved during more prosperous times.

Since 1933, the trend of school savings has again taken an upward swing.

During the school year of 1929, over $29,000,000 were deposited by boys and girls of this country.

In the Anacostia High School, 360 students—which comprise 23 per cent of the enrollment—have savings accounts in the school bank.

If such favorable response can be obtained under existing conditions, does it not indicate that the American youth deserves the right of banking facilities within the school? Does it not demonstrate that young Americans are eager to assume a position of economic, as well as political, independence?

Methodists Told Unity Is Progress

Dr. Rustin Warns Of 'Confusion' in Joining of the Various Branches

Progress through united Methodism, despite "inevitable confusion" was predicted last night by Dr. John W. Rustin, of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, at the annual Washington Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dr. Rustin was one of three speakers who discussed approaching unity before more than 1,000 delegates and guests at Asbury M. E. Church. The others were Richard L. Shipley, editor of the Methodist Protestant Recorder, representing Dr. James H. Straughn, president of that branch, who was ill; and Dr. Willis J. King, Methodist Episcopal.

"It is only through confusion," Dr. Rustin said, "that we have grown. It took a confusion that was big enough to cause the Civil War to make us realize that slavery was a damnable thing and ought to be blotted out."

Warns of Cost

Dr. King, president of the Gammon Theological Seminary, warning about the cost of Methodist unity, told his hearers that "it will cost all parties concerned, and no one should be ready for such an adventure unless he is willing to pay the price."

He pointed out that "even when we achieve Methodist unity it will have little value if it ends there. It is only the station to a greater union of all the churches."

Saying the Unification Conference in Kansas City on April 26 will join more than 8,000,000 Methodists, Dr. Shipley declared its real strength will not lie in numbers, but in its spirit.

"It would be a pity if the Methodist Protestants or the Methodist Episcopalians wanted to get things out of Methodist unity just for themselves," he declared.

"Damnable Philosophy"

"The most damnable philosophy is to live in a world like this and not be confused," Dr. Rustin, declared, asking people to face the fact that "there will be confusion as we enter into greater Methodism." We must realize, he emphasized, that we will not have perfection. The choir of Mount Vernon Place Church, conducted by Deane Shure, sang. Dr. D. W. Hargis, of the Delaware Conference, gave the devotional message.

Kenwood Blooms To Attract 100,000

More than 2,000 Oshita cherry trees along 3 miles of avenues at Kenwood, Md., will be in bloom today and tomorrow, Donal Chamberlin, of Kennedy-Chamberlin Development Co., said last night. He said 100,000 visitors were expected Sunday.

The first trees at Kenwood, lining its streets, were planted 10 years ago and others have been added annually. Last year, Chamberlin said, 50 were planted.

Capital News In Brief

Elevator Captive Saved

A fire rescue squad last night supplied what umph an automatic elevator lacked and rescued Peyton Brady, 16, of 1343 Clifton street northwest, from a precarious perch between floors.

The squad was called when young Brady, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Brady and a student at Central High School, found himself the sole passenger in an elevator which suddenly ceased to function. His calls brought the rescue squad, which released him, and police, who supplied advice.

To Study Government

Nine Radcliffe College students will leave Cambridge, Mass., today for a week's study of the personnel problems of the Federal Government.

During their stay here they will be received by Secretary of Labor Perkins; Mrs. Lucille McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission; Dr. Mary H. S. Hayes, of the National Youth Administration; Dr. Martha M. Eliot, associate director of the Children's Bureau; Miss Mary La Dame, special assistant to Secretary Perkins; Miss Tracy Copp, of the Federal Board for Vocational Education; Miss Mary Robinson, of the Women's Bureau, and Miss Helen Ringe, of the Social Security Board.

Now It's the Green Hornet

Last night Edward Robey, of 1605 Isherwood street northeast, was escorting Mrs. Robey to a movie when he passed his automobile parked at Fifteenth and E streets northeast. He noticed a sign in the window and investigated.

The sign read "The Green Hornet Strikes Again" and bore the crude representation of an insect. Robey found his automobile had been ransacked and the tools were missing.

Detectives Robert Barrett and Edgar Scott, who ended the career of "The Weasel" some six months ago, were put on the trail of The Hornet.

Policeman Hurt in Crash

A motorcycle patrolman was injured last night when he collided with an automobile at Observatory Circle and Davis street northwest, following a misunderstanding of hand signals while the car was making a turn.

The policeman, Harold A. Mechem, 35, of 5208 Conduit road northwest, attached to No. 1 precinct, was hurled to the street and suffered lacerations of the legs. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital and relieved from duty.

Life Begins at 70

Born a Slave, Pastor at 87 Has Big Church Free of Debt

The Rev. Walter Brooks Sought to Leave Pulpit of Nineteenth Street Baptist Church Early in Century but Still Serves

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Early in the century, when the Rev. Walter H. Brooks had completed 20 years as pastor of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church, he began to grow conscious of his age.

"I thought the congregation might be wanting a younger man to lead them," he says. "So one day I went to the Lord for advice. 'Now, Lord,' I said, 'I don't want to be idle. Send me to a smaller church in a smaller place if You think it best.'

"From then on I seemed to take on fresh strength and renewed power. And so I am still in the pulpit today."

Indeed, he is not merely filling the pulpit of the congregation, which will mark its 100th birthday anniversary in August, when its pastor celebrates his eighty-eighth, but some of its proudest gains in membership and indebtedness reduction have been achieved since the Rev. Mr. Brooks decided he was not too old to carry on.

1,800 in Congregation

Today Nineteenth Street Baptist has a membership of 1,800. There has been no mortgage debt on the old red brick structure at the corner of I street for some 20 years. Attendance at Sunday services is high.

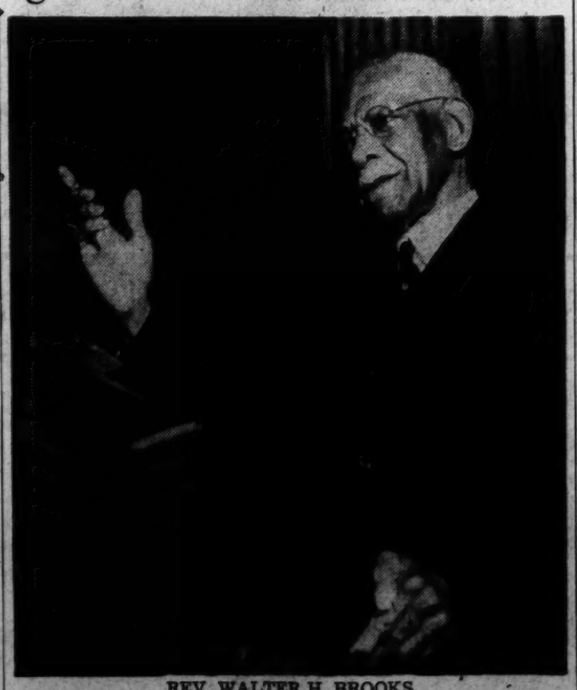
Tall, neatly dressed and well preserved for his 87 years, the shepherd of this large flock is deeply grateful to the Lord for having dealt so kindly with him.

"I was born into slavery," he says, "but my father's master was benevolent and religious. My father and my mother were treated well. I had the opportunity to go to college and I am the father of five children. My health has been good. The first illness I ever suffered occurred last year when I was out of the pulpit for three months on account of low blood pressure."

He breaks into a gay chuckle as he adds, in a last-but-not-least vein: "And I have not been off a pay roll as a preacher since May, 1874."

Born in Richmond

The Rev. Mr. Brooks was born in Richmond, Va., on August 30, 1851. At 15, a year after the end of the Civil War, he entered Lincoln University, in Chester County, Pa. When that institution launched an expansion drive in 1934 he made the first contribution of $1,000 from his meager savings. Two years later his congregation presented him with 54 silver dollars on the occasion of his fifty-fourth anniversary as pastor and 50 of these went to Lincoln University. The remaining four he gave to Mrs. Brooks.



REV. WALTER H. BROOKS

In 1873 he started out as a Bible teacher and in the following year he was married. His first wife bore him ten children, five of whom are still living. One is assistant principal of Dunbar High School, another teaches at Shaw Junior High. A 64-year-old son works for the Government.

The first Mrs. Brooks died in 1912 and three years later the minister remarried. His second wife died in 1931 and on his eighty-second birthday the preacher took his third spouse, whom he baptized when she was 11. They live at 1138 Eighteenth street northwest, which is easy walking distance from the church for its sprightly pastor.

Easter Menu Given Springlike Touch By Roast Basted in Fruit Juices

The gay Easter centerpiece (above) shows a flirtatious bunny rabbit drawing a wagon filled with freshly cut flowers. All the dainty marguerites, fragrant freesias, violets and lilies of the valley seen above are already hiding their sweet-smelling faces in and among local markets. The floral designs on the frosted cupcakes repeat the patterns of the blossoms in the bunnies' basket

Colorful Salad And Centerpiece Add to Gayety

Avocado Pear May Be Mixed With Eggs

It is already time to think about the Easter menu and make plans for the Easter roast. Have you ever experienced the savory and delicious flavor of meats baked into tender savoriness as you baste them with mingled pan drippings and a nectar of whole-fruit fame and variety? Easter roasts of lamb, ham, veal or chicken are bound to be successful under the fruity glaze of this subtle basting medium. The pulp-and-juice substance of whole apricots, plums, blended peaches, nectarines and pears may be employed.

Instructions for basting and glazing roasts are simple and include two methods, gauged to time only. One applies to long-term baking, and one is for smaller roasts, such as double pork chops, the small-sized baked ham entrees that are merely thick slices or come out of cans, or veal birds. For these, basting begins immediately and is frequent throughout the short baking period, at a temperature of approximately 400 degrees F. Large roasts take the usual low oven temperature (325 degrees F.) and basting is required only for the last hour or so. When basting ham, a tablespoon of brown sugar is added optionally to each cup of whole-fruit nectar.

Arrange to serve with ham, if you wish, family-sized portions of sliced, unpeeled apple rings, carrots or sweet potatoes. The drippings of the ham together with apricot or plum nectar, for example, heighten their flavor and give a highly desirable candied or glazed appearance. Or you may bake such vegetables alone for this same glazed effect, using a combination of one cup of whole-fruit nectar, one-third cup of melted butter and two tablespoons of sugar.

Easter menus and refreshments usually turn to the salad to give support to the seasonal theme. Everyone looks for a practical and appropriate salad that is contrarily decorative as well for the luncheons, dinners and suppers of the Easter season. These unusually hard specifications are embodied in the following Easter ring salad which consists of single rings of avocado pears on a background of salad greens as the frame for quartered hard-cooked or deviled eggs. Finely minced parsley or green pepper and onion is scattered over the quartered eggs to rival the spring-green outer surface of the ornamental avocado oval.

Prepare avocado ovals for four by cutting a large avocado or Calavo into halves lengthwise, removing the seed and pulling the skin from each half. Cut two ovals lengthwise of each half. The remaining avocados may be wrapped in waxed paper and reserved under refrigeration for the salad of the next meal. Or cube the remaining avocado and mix lightly with a combination of celery and hard-cooked eggs, with which to fill the Calavo ovals. Sprinkle cut surfaces of the avocado with lemon juice and salt before utilizing as the salad foundation.

Entries in Macaroni Contest Bring Forth Recipes On Substantial Dishes and Delicate Desserts

Egg Noodle Custard With Yankee Doodle Sauce Is One

By Alice Clayton
The Post Food Editor.

SHADES of Yankee Doodle were evoked by last week's recipe contest on macaroni dishes. Entries ranged from substantial main dishes to delicate desserts. "Egg Noodle Custard with Yankee Doodle Sauce," from the imaginative Miss Charlotte Fay Hiehle, 3041 Tunlaw road northwest, was one of many original recipes submitted. This combined egg noodles with lemon extract, milk, eggs and sugar, and had a "Doodle" dry sauce of ginger, orange rind and ground nuts.

Another interesting entry was a saucy one called "Goop," which was a savory blend of spaghetti, chicken and veal knuckles. Macaroni salads of every description were entered, each one sounding more inviting than the last. The casseroles, loaves and rings of noodles, spaghetti or macaroni were numerous, some with Latin dashes of bravado, some with sophisticated sauces of sour cream, olives, and mixed vegetables. The favorite formula of Washington housewives, however, proved to be a combination of mushrooms, pimientos, onions, grated cheese, green peas and noodles or macaroni. This popular combination often included tender morsels of tuna fish or salmon thrown in for good measure.

Reverses Custom

Although cereals have stood on their capable feet as main-dish foods for centuries, they make an about face in this case. Miss Jean Frantz, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, has created an egg noodle pudding of such delicate flavor that it forms a perfect dessert food. Not only is her recipe inexpensive, highly nutritious and body building, but it brings the cereal into the dessert realm with marked success. First prize of $3.00 goes to Miss Frantz for this recipe.

Miss J. Frantz

Egg Noodle Pudding

Parboil 1 paskage of egg noodles (for 7) in 4 quarts of rapidly boiling water to which 1 tablespoon of salt has been added. Drain. Cream ¼ cup of butter add 1 cup of sugar and 1 tablespoon of flour, sifted together. Then mix in 2 well-beaten eggs and the grated rind and juice of ½ lemon. Add ½ cup of chopped walnuts, ½ cup of plumped raisins, 3 thinly sliced apples and ½ teaspoon of salt. One-quarter cup of finely shredded citron and almonds, mixed, may be added, as well as 1 tablespoon of chopped maraschino cherries, if desired. Combine all ingredients with the noodles, pour in a well-greased baking dish, set in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven for 1 hour. The top of the pudding may be sprinkled with a little finely ground ginger or cinnamon. Serve with whipped cream.

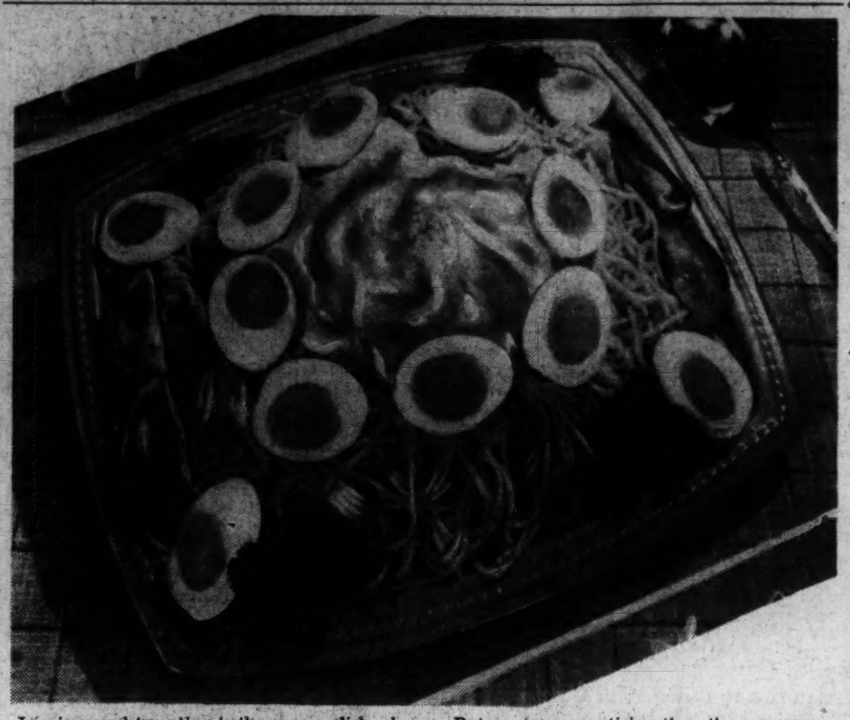
Distinctive Delicacy

Although many inventive ways of macaroni or noodle preparation were submitted in this contest, one of the most distinctive methods is the recipe below. It was entered by Mrs. James Jay Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, for which a second prize of $2 has been awarded. Peanut butter is added to macaroni, already rich with butter, milk and a spicy tomato sauce. The result is a new and interesting flavor for a meatless Lenten dish.

Mrs. J. Lawlor

Macaroni With Peanut Butter And Tomato Sauce

Parboil ½ package of macaroni for 7 minutes in 2 quarts of boiling water to which ½ teaspoon salt has been added. Drain. Stir 1 cup of peanut butter into the macaroni, a teaspoon at a time. Cover and set in a warm place until the peanut butter melts and blends in. Add ½ teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of paprika and 1 tablespoon of minced parsley.



Luscious and tempting is the savory dish, above. But no more appetizing than the many unusual noodle, macaroni or spaghetti dishes entered in last week's Post recipe contest. Typical of the novel suggestions entered for the use of cereal-grain foods is this mildly flavored spaghetti entree. It is garnished with tomato slices and parsley for color and vitamines and is topped with halved hard-cooked eggs and a snappy cheese sauce. An artful Lenten dish, enticing to the most worn-out Lenten observer

Then mix in ½ cup of bread crumbs. Add 1½ tablespoons of flour to 1½ cups of milk, first rubbing to a smooth paste with a small quantity of milk. Then pour into the macaroni mixture and blend thoroughly. Pour into a well greased baking dish, cover top with crumbs and dot with peanut butter. Bake until brown about 20 minutes. Serve with the following tomato sauce. For this cook 2 cups of tomato pulp with 2 slices of chopped onion, 1 bay leaf, 3 cloves for 15 minutes. Rub through a strainer. Melt 3 tablespoons of butter, add 3 tablespoons of flour and cook until smooth, then add the tomato, 1 teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of pepper and 2 teaspoons of sugar, with a small pinch of soda if tomatoes are very acid. Bring to the boiling point and serve.

From Old Vienna

From the former Austria comes the savory noodle dish submitted by Mrs. Willis Elliott, 3921 Georgia avenue northwest. This old world country, famous for its waltzes and noodles, has given American housewives many delicious dishes. None of these dishes, however, is more satisfying and memorable in flavor than this veal and noodle entree. It has been awarded a prize of $1.

Veal Paprika With Viennese Noodles

Cut 2 pounds of veal steak into 2-inch pieces and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon of salt and ⅛ teaspoon of pepper or paprika. Cook 1 clove of garlic in 2 tablespoons of butter or shortening for 3 minutes. Add 2 pounds of veal steak and sear on all sides until light brown. Add 1½ cups of water, cover and simmer for 1 hour over very low heat. Add ¾ cup of sour cream and 1 teaspoon of paprika, romove garlic and reheat. Arrange Viennese noodles around the outside of hot platter and put veal paprika in center. Garnish with strips of pimiento. For noodles, cook 1 package of wide noodles as directed on box or package, and strain. Melt 1 tablespoon of ¼ cup butter, add ½ cup of chopped almonds or Brazil nuts and stir over a low heat until brown. Add ¼ cup of butter, the noodles and 2 teaspoons of poppyseeds. Stir lightly until heated thoroughly. Serve with veal paprika. For meatless Lenten meals, creamed fish or creamed mushrooms may be used.

Salad From Cereal

The natural sequence of well ordered food courses gets mixed up a bit here. The cereal grain food moves up from its original course into honor place as a salad. And what a salad! Cool, crisp, quickly prepared and pleasing to almost any taste. The addition of deceptive little chesse "snails" makes this salad serving delicious and festive enough for company dinners. Miss Joyce Talbett, Apartment 617, Sixteenth and R streets northwest, wins a prize of $1 for her recipe.
wins a prize of $1 for her recipe.

Macaroni Salad with Cheese Snails

Cook ½ of a 9-ounce package of elbow macaroni for about 12 minutes in 2 quarts of boiling water, to which 1½ teaspoons of salt has been added. Drain and chill. Cut in small pieces and add 1 cup of diced celery, ½ cup of tomatoes, cut in pieces, ¼ cup of diced pimiento, 2 hard cooked eggs, 1 teaspoon of salt, a little black pepper, or Italian pepper, a few chopped capers, 2 tablespoons of finely chopped ripe olives, if desired, and a few minced anchovies, if the taste is favored. Moisten with salad dressing, Spanish dressing or mayonnaise, until of required creamy smoothness. Reserve some of the eggs for garnish. Serve on a bed of crisp watercress, chicory or lettuce and garnish with sliced egg. Serve with these cheese snails. Put ½ pound of American cheese through a food chopper, add 2 tablespoons of melted butter and cream them together. Add one small onion, chopped fine, 1 chopped pimiento, ¼ cup of catsup, ½ teaspoon of salt and a dash of cayenne. Mix well. Remove the crusts from 5 slices of bread and spread thinly with the cheese mixture, then roll. Allow to stand for several hours. Cut in slices about ½ inch thick and toast on one side just before serving.

Another Called 'Goop' Blends Spaghetti With Chicken and Veal

Oriental Magic

The Far East must have inspired Mrs. Annie Butler to concoct the reciepe for ka-bobs, below. The Orient teams with delightful ka-bob recipes which feature tomatoes and other fruits or vegetables broiled and served in the manner Mrs. Butler suggests. Maybe it is her Southern accent which brought forth this recipe for macaroni. She, like many Washington Post entrants, lives in Atlanta, Ga.—at 1171 Egleston to be exact. She wins a prize of $1 for her entry.

Macaroni Ka-Bobs

Cook ½ pound of elbow macaroni or spaghetti in boiling water, slightly salted, until tender and then drain. Add 1 tablespoon of butter, then arrange in buttered baking cups. Pour over each cup 1 or 2 tablespoons of 2 slightly beaten eggs, or divide the egg mixture between the macaroni cups. Place in moderate oven for about 15 minutes or just long enough for the egg mixture to cook. While the macaroni cups are baking, broil 3 large tomatoes, cut in slices, and 1 large onion, using the remainder of the butter for topping on these. Season to taste with salt and pepper and a very little paprika, or curry powder if desired. Arrange broiled onion and tomato slices with macaroni mounds on each and serve at once with a hot, mild cheese sauce. Garnish with slices of stuffed olives.

Egg-Cheese Canape

Something new in canapes: Mix a raw egg yolk with a dash of onion, salt, paprika, celery salt and 3 tablespoons yellow cream cheese. Mix in half a teaspoon catsup and quickly spread on 15 round crackers or pieces of toast. Broil just long enough to puff up the topping and serve at once.

NO WASTE WITH FLAKO PIE CRUST

Fresh Egg Whites Are Not Best For Whipping

To get the greatest volume from egg whites take the following precautions: Be sure to keep any bit of egg yolk out of the whites—the yolks contain fat which prevents the whites from whipping up stiffly. Then be sure to get every bit of white out from the shell, not overlooking the stringy white cord which tends to cling to the shell. These cords add to the whipping quality of the whites.

Have egg whites at room temperature when you beat them. If they come out of a cold refrigerator, allow them to warm up before beating. For making angel foods and meringues, let the whites stand covered for several hours in a warm kitchen before whipping, and you will get a better volume of whipped white.

Your Figure, Madame!

—By Ida Jean Kain

Middle-Aged Women Let Themselves Go as Husbands Keep Trim

SOME WOMEN just don't try! I am talking about the ones I saw at a social affair the other evening. They were all between 40 and 55 and so expensively groomed that presumably they have both the time and the money to make themselves unusually attractive.

But they were not up to their husbands and, generally speaking, the contrast was appalling. On the average the men were trim and spruce with that air of alertness which seems to characterize the successful business man. Eight out of every ten of the women were grossly overweight—and avoirdupois never appears to such disadvantage as in formal evening gowns!

So many of them were obese that I wondered whether they might not be among the 5 per cent who are glandularly overweight. But I got the right answer at dinner. As a typical example, one who was about 50 pounds overweight said she hadn't eaten since 3 o'clock in the afternoon. She was too hungry to wait for the soup so she signalled to a waiter to bring some butter and she filled in with the rolls.

Fattening—But Um-m-m

From there on she took everything in her stride. She had a second serving of fried scallops, then went through the main course like a hungry farmhand.

Usually you will find me fighting on the side of the women. There are so many who have a struggle, and I mean a struggle, to make ends meet, raise their families, and help their husbands haul themselves up the ladder of success by their bootstraps. They have very little money and not very many minutes out of the day to spend on themselves.

But these women were not in that category. They either didn't care, or they liked their food too well. Either way, it is a mistake! It is really tragic for food to be so important to a woman that she disregards her health and appearance. Overindulgence in food to that extent is as bad as overindulgence in alcohol—and probably the habit is just as hard to break! Any woman who can do an about face and reduce after she has allowed herself to become excessively overweight certainly deserves all the credit in the world.

Determination Wins

It is had enough to conquer an appetite that is only a little too large but it takes a heroic struggle to stay on a diet when you have been overeating for years. Your diet itself, however, will help you. Your menus should be high in protein, vitamins and minerals, so, have lean meat twice a day, one egg, two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk and liberal servings of green leafy vegetables and fresh fruits.

The butter must be restricted to three pats, each one-fourth of an inch thick, per day and the bread to four slices of whole wheat. In addition, the reducer should have daily one concentrated A, B, D, vitamin capsule.

With excessive overweight, it is a temptation to see how fast you can reduce, but you should never try to lose more than 2 pounds per week.

In Print for Art Exhibition

You will probably steal the spotlight from the current Corcoran Biennial Art Exhibition if you put in an appearance in a gown like the one above. It is just as appealing for the girl who trots about to teas and cocktails as for the earnest little "exhibitionist." Its fabric is cool, neatly tailored black chiffon, printed in horizontal and vertical bands of spring posies, in all the colors of the rainbow. A narrow black patent belt slims down the pleated skirt and the collarless neckline which ends in a simply knotted loop. This sheer, worn over its own taffeta slip, looks like a redingote but is so much cooler it will safely see you through the hottest Washington summer

The Gentler Sex

—BY MALVINA LINDSAY

The Helpful Husband

"This thing is simply driving me wild."

"What thing?"

"Well, whether to get a little print ensemble with a jacket for Easter, or a little black sheer wool suit."

"I'd get the black."

"You would?"

"Yes, I think a woman of your age——"

"What do you mean, my age? You talk as if I were an old woman."

"Oh, no—well, what I mean is you don't want to dress like a 16-year-old girl."

"Why don't I? I only wear a size 16. Anyway, EVERYBODY wears prints."

"All right, go ahead and get the print."

"Still, I think prints make you look sort of blah, unless they're terribly expensive, don't you?"

"I'd get the other then."

"What other?"

"Well, whatever other thing it was you were talking about."

"You want me to get the cheaper one—is that it?"

"Oh, no, no! You just go ahead and get what you want."

"Well, but the trouble is I don't KNOW what I want."

"I can't understand that. Say, you know how I buy a suit of clothes?"

"Yes, I know. I've heard it often enough."

"All right, then; I'll just keep out of this. You asked me——"

"I know. I'm sorry. Of course I'd get a lot of good out of the black wool—if I could find one that was a little different. I just don't want to look like EVERYBODY."

"I thought you said everybody was wearing prints."

"Oh that wasn't what I meant. Say, tell me this—do you think women look best in prints or solid colors?"

"We-ll, I don't know. It all depends upon the woman. Now I saw a middle-aged woman today——"

"Wait! What do you call middle-aged?"

"Oh—well, this woman must have been about 37 years old—maybe 37½, and she had on an assemble——"

"You mean an ensemble."

"All right then, whatever you want to call it. Anyway it was some dark color."

"Was it navy blue?"

"Either that or black."

"You're sure it wasn't brown?"

"Well, now, it might have been. Anyway, I'm telling you this woman was a knockout. She must have been about 5 feet 5½ inches tall and weighed around 132 pounds——"

"Where did you see this woman?"

"Where was it? Oh, yes, it was on the bus."

"Was it a suit or coat she had on?"

"I don't know. Anyway, it fit her like a glove."

"You WOULD notice that. Well, what kind of a hat did she wear with it?"

"It was some kind of a dark hat."

"Big or little?"

"Well, I couldn't say that it was either."

"You're impossible. Of course I could get a navy blue. Do you think I'd look good in navy blue?"

"Well,—I—I don't know. Of course I'd have to see you in the assemble."

"ENSEMBLE!"

"All right, then. Of course I will say this—a woman never looks as fat in dark clothes as in light."

"So you think I look fat?"

"Now I didn't say that."

"No, but you meant it. Say, do you know how much I weigh? Just 1¾ pounds more than that woman on the bus."

"Say, theres' no use in getting mad. You asked me for my opinion. Now I'm just going to keep still."

"I'm sorry. I do want your opinion. You see this thing of trying to decide what to get for Easter has just set my nerves on edge. You know how it is when you feel so unsettled.

"Well, why bother, then? Why don't you just wear what you've already got?"

"How can I when everybody will be out in new clothes?"

"But awhile ago you said you didn't want to look like everybody."

"You make me sick!"

"Now what have I done?"

"Nothing. Go on and read your paper."

Prizes Offered For Your Favorite Fritter Recipes

FRITTERS, crisp, appetizing and delicate in texture, will serve as contest theme for the new Post recipe competition. Every type of fritter concoction will be eligible for one of the cash awards which have been enticing housewives for many, many months. First award is $3, second is $2 and there are three additional prizes of $1 each.

Mrs. Barabara Lipscomb, 20 H street northeast, has suggested that fritters be served this week. She, like many other thrifty Washington home-makers, knows the virtue of fritter combinations, realizing that they can stretch dinner, luncheon or even breakfast menus better than almost any other food. Your entry may feature a sweet fruit fritter, with its own delicate sauce, suitable for Sunday night supper entrees. If your preference is toward corn, green peas, fish or fowl fritters—or toward any of the ingenious meat and vegetable fritter combines—enter one or more of these recipes. Mail all carefully written recipes to Alice Clayton, The Post food editor, before April 8. Recipes must be kitchen tested. A snapshot or photograph of yourself may be included for publication, just in case you are a prize winner.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Tires of Every Beau in Approximately a Month; Is This a Normal Attitude? How Explain It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 18, fairly attractive, have quite a few dates and enjoy good times. I don't go with any particular boy steady, but I do see one oftener than the others. He is 24 and I like him quite a bit, but that's as far as it goes. Before I met him I went out frequently with another young man whom I liked very much for about a month, after which my interest began to lag until finally I couldn't bear to go out with him.

I have known him for about three years, during which time he has come and gone and now is back again. He telephones me persistently and I try, without much success, to make him understand that I don't care to go out with him. I don't want to seem rude, but what can I do? He isn't the only one I have treated this way and I wonder if something is wrong with me. After I have gone with a boy a month or so I begin to dislike him and actually become ill when I have made a date and don't want to keep it.

Is this a normal way to feel? I keep thinking that if I can't like anyone longer than a month or two, I'd be doing harm to myself and the boy if I ever got married later on. The feeling is beginning to come again in regard to the latest young man. I'm trying my best to like him, but I'm afraid I won't win out. When I was 14 I had a crush on a man who was 26. I have never forgotten him and am always comparing others with him. I never see him, but do you think he has anything to do with the way I feel? D. E. E.

Fretted Quest for Ideal

DEAR D. E. E.: I imagine your difficulty has to do with being a bit too intense in your reaction to the opposite sex. Instead of taking boys as they come, balancing their virtues against their shortcomings and associating with them on a comradely basis, you are handicapping yourself by looking for perfection; you are nervously on the alert for the beau ideal, with whom you can fall tremendously in love. When boys fail to measure up to this heroic pattern, you are sick with disappointment and resentment.

There is a considerable possibility that your "crush," at the age of 14, on the man of 26, is partially responsible for your subsequent dissatisfaction with all and sundry beaux who have aproached you since. No doubt the impression he made on your mind is rather indelibly fixed. But whether that image of ultimate manly desirability is a true picture of his worth, or a likeness of any man you are apt to meet on this earth, is definitely open to question. I daresay you didn't get to know him well; that you simply worshipped him from a respectful distance; and that, therefore, you never had any opportunity to test the authenticity of your concept of him. He might have turned out to be as drably disappointing as the others, if you had got to know him for what he really was.

However, you may rest assured that there is nothing distressingly abnormal about your fretted quest for the overwhelming Prince Charming. Most girls of great potential emotional reach; of sensitive discernment; of discriminating preference; with delicately poetic and imaginative mind—and particularly those who have lapped up a quantity of romantic literature during their early adolescence—go through just such a period of adjusting themselves to men as they are, as against the men-like-gods they had dreamed they would be.

It is not at all improbable that you will have to wait until you are 23, or thereabouts, before you find the man who will suffice as the answer to your prayer. In the meantime, I think you will be wise to promote your social education by adapting yourself philosophically to whatever respectable run-of-mine beaux come your way. Don't look to them as possible Galahads or Launcelots. Treat them as boy friends; as comradely acquaintances of the opposite sex. Bear in mind that they are just plain Tom Jones and Henry Smith and John Brown—nice boys in their way who like you enough to spend time with you. When you stop measuring them against impossible standards, I think much of your quarrel with them will evaporate. M. H.

The Ring Ceremony

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you kindly publish the usual practice with regard to the placing of the wedding ring upon the bride's finger, etc., at a church wedding (Catholic)? If possible, I would like to see the information in your column this week. Will certainly appreciate it. HUSBAND-TO-BE.

Four-Way Transfer

DEAR H. T. B.: In Catholic wedding ceremonies, when the moment arrives for placing the ring upon the bride's hand, it is produced by the best man from his vest pocket and given to the officiating clergyman, who blesses it before transferring it to the bridegroom, who, in turn, slips it on the bride's finger while repeating the ritualistic words pronounced by the priest. M. H.

What Is "Petting?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me what "petting" is. Is it kissing, "necking," holding hands, or all of them together? I am 17 this winter and have had practically no dates. I am from a good family and want to do the right thing. Is it all right for a boy to put his arm around me? I don't allow boys to kiss me, of course. Perhaps this sounds rather silly, but I would like to know. SEVENTEEN.

A Moot Question

DEAR SEVENTEEN: Judging from the number of requests I have had recently, from boys as well as girls, for a definition of the term "petting," a word which seems to be much in vogue amongst socially knowing young moderns—you are far from being the only youngster who is completely in the dark on the subject. I should think that "petting" means just what it says, in the dictionary sense: that is to say—to caress or to fondle. It presupposes a degree of consecrated personal intimacy which simply doesn't exist in a friendly interchange between proudly self-respecting young persons, who reserve their deepest affections for those who are to play significant and lasting roles in their lives.

"Necking," I surmise, is simply another and more vulgar way of referring to the emotional intimacy implied by the word "petting." A fleeting, friendly, or casually affectionate kiss is not to be construed as "petting"—at least, not in my vocabulary. Nor is hand-holding. Either of these, I should say, is simply a gesture of warm friendliness—to be granted only to firm friends of proven worth.

As for the propriety of letting a boy put his arm around you—I suppose there is nothing really wrong about it. However, as an isolated gesture of attentiveness, I rate it as being both witless and awkward, and can imagine that it might lead to more embarrassment—one way and another—than either hand holding or the chaste salute of a "good-night kiss." But get this fact firmly in mind: the worst possible mistake you could make would be to suppose you have to tolerate any sort of affectional approach from a youth, simply as a matter of being socially obliging. You don't have to, and he will think less of you if you do. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes

Lady Spring's Arch Ogling Has Gotham Ga-Ga

AS MARCH skips out of town like a ferocious Bengal tiger, New York is undoubtedly going slightly en fete, or ga-ga, due to the presence of spring and the imminence of the World's Fair. Of course the hydra-headed metropolis is not concentrating on one focus. It has one eye on Europe, one on the Fair, one on Wall Street, one on les affaires in Washington and several others peering about in a generally panicky way.

Even so, we are hitting up a pretty decent pace. Rich refugees are returning from Palm Beach for a few nervous weeks. Franchot Tone is still mobbed here and there. Knee-caps are showing along Fifth avenue, now that skirts seem to have settled definitely at 17 inches above the sidewalk—and my venerable but still observant spouse, Leonard Hall, remarks that he is not surprised at the number of ugly legs along our better boulevards, but at the really remarkably large assortment of pretty ones. Smoked glasses, he gets for Easter. Mr. Rockefeller's eight stately elms are all safely planted along Fifth avenue between Forty-ninth and Fifty-first streets, and returning birds look at them tentatively.

Dorothy Lamour has finished delighting the local peasants at a Broadway movie house—wearing a red sarong. Sub-debs are getting into strict training for facing the cameramen next fall. With Lent ending and the fair looming, Times Square showmen are pepped by better business. If the world doesn't explode under our very feet the citizens are looking forward to a busy, amusing and even lucratice summer. But I can't deny that the village and its yeomen are a bit jittery. We watch, work, pray—and get happily excited over New York's usual bright trivialities.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Dancing in the streets has become a common expression of late years, to express uncommon joy. But it actually happened here the other night. Several hundred lads of City College, enthused over a basketball victory, danced in Times Square. Constable Perkins, on duty, did nothing to quell them—but he did not join in the panicky polka . . . The International Casino, that huge Tunes Square night club which failed in January, is to reopen in May to catch some World's Fair money, I hear. Wonder who the little girl in the epidermis will be? . . .

Our Mrs. Wagner, who runs a pie bakery out in Brooklyn, got a terrible turn the other night. Something fell out of the sky, bashed in the roof and then completely disappeared. Officials and hawkshaws, after a thorough investigation, were entirely baffled. Muttering simething about "Maybe it was a meteor!" they slipped away into the night—leaving Mrs. Wagner with a nasty hole in the roof of her pie factory and a bit of nervous shock. Just another of New York's mysterious didoes!

Esme O'Brien, the cute little Norwegian minx who succeeded Mimi Baker as last year's "Glam Girl No. 1," has been keeping company with Jack Chrysler, son of the motor tycoon.

Eyebrow Hints

Hollywood, Calif.—When Perc Westmore gives Warner Bros. starlets lessons in eyebrows he warns them against ending up with two hard black semicircles. He believes only stray hairs should be plucked, then the natural brow should be darkened with short pencil strokes and the line blurred a little with the finger.

Cherry Blossom Time Speeds Social Whirl

Round of Fetes, Planned This Week-End for Out-of-Towners, Enlivens Lenten Season Calendar

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS will vie with visitors for attention this week-end as a round of fetes for out-of-towners speeds up the social whirl. Parties—morning, noon and night—will enliven a calendar that is unusually crowded for a Lenten season.

Especially interesting visitors will be Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Hanna, of Cleveland, who will arrive today to be guest of Federal Communications Commissioner Thad H. Brown and Mrs. Brown at their home on Van Buren street.

Mr. Hanna, a grandson of the late Mark Hanna, is widely known as a sportsman. Both he and his wife dash here, there, and everywhere to horse and dog shows and frequently serve as judges in such events. Their estate, Paddock Lane, near Cleveland, is noted for its stables and kennels, and their horses are frequently shown in major exhibitions.

An accomplished horsewoman, Mrs. Hanna is also a talented writer; has contributed to a number of sports magazines and is on the staff of one. She and her husband have spent the past few days in Pittsburgh attending a horse show and they are coming to Washington directly from there.

To Be Present At Party Today

Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who have been planning a series of parties this spring but hadn't yet set the dates, decided, as soon as they learned the Hannas would be here, that the first should take place today. The guest list was hastily made out and plans were completed virtually on the spur of the moment, with Mrs. Brown calling the guests by telephone rather than issuing cards.

The company will include a number of Gridiron Club members and a sizable section of officials and persons from residential circles. Among the official hostesses who will assist Mrs. Brown are Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Charles L. McNary and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster. The party will take place from 5 to 7 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will entertain at the second of their series around the middle of April.

Miss Stevens to Visit Maj. and Mrs. Gwynn

Another interesting out-of-towner who will arrive in Washington today is Miss Margaret Stevens, of Philadelphia, who will be the guest of Maj. and Mrs. Harry Gwynn in their Georgetown home. This afternoon, the Gwynns will entertain at the first in a series of cocktail parties that they will give this spring.

Incidentally, today also marks the wedding anniversary of Maj. and Mrs. Gwynn, but the party is not to be an anniversary celebration. "It's just a coincidence that they're falling on the same day," Mrs. Gwynn said yesterday. Her husband once served as military attache at the United States Legation in Guatemala, and their home is filled with handsome pieces of furniture and objects of art collected from many parts of the world.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: The retiring Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. T. K. Bewley will leave for New York today and Mrs. Bewley will sail from there tomorrow on the Aquitania for England. Mr. Bewley will return to Washington briefly to close their apartment on N street and then will join his wife in London, where he will take over his duties with the Treasury . . . Mrs. Henry F. Grady will entertain at luncheon today at Columbia Country Club . . . Dynamic Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner, left yesterday for New York, where she will stay briefly before going on to Connecticut for a short visit with friends. She will be back in Washington the latter part of next week . . . Col. and Mrs. Robert Bruce McBride will entertain at a cocktail party on Wednesday, April 12, in their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren. The event is being planned in compliment to Miss Isabel Moore and Jane Sandsbury May, of Anderson, Ind., who will arrive in Washington the latter part of next week to visit Col. and Mrs. McBride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white tulle, made with a fitted bodice, a full skirt with a long train and short puffed sleeves. Her tulle veil was caught with a coronet of lilies of the valley, and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Sallie Pomerantz, of Philadelphia, the maid of honor, was gowned in bouffant white tulle over ice blue satin. Frederick Polangin was best man. Immediately following the wedding there was a buffet supper, and later the couple left on a trip to Florida and Cuba. They will make their home here at 2440 Sixteenth street after April 15.

Mary Owens Is Wed to Rollin d'Espard

Ceremony Performed at First Baptist Church By Rev. Mr. Weaver

Before an altar banked with palms, ferns and spring flowers, Miss Mary Custis Lee Owens, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence J. Owens, of Chevy Chase, Md., became the bride last evening of Rollin Morgan d'Espard, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Seabury d'Espard, also of Chevy Chase. The ceremony took place at 7:30 at the First Baptist Church, the Rev. Rufus W. Weaver officiating.

Mrs. Robert King Norton, Mrs. Robert Leslie Wiseman, Miss Margaret Franklin and Miss Julia Riley Kennedy served as bridesmaids. They were dressed in chartreuse frocks with net skirts and lace jackets. All the attendants wore clusters of flowers in their hair and carried spring blossoms.

A reception for members of the families and close friends followed at the home of the bride's parents, 6403 Meadow lane. Mrs. Owens wore a gown of rose lace and a corsage of orchids, and the bridegroom's mother was in periwinkle blue with a corsage of the same flowers.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Mr. and Mrs. Carr, Out of Prague, Won't Return Here Until the Fall

WASHINGTON friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, who have been burning to hear first-hand accounts of their exciting adventures in Czecho-Slovakia, will have to wait until next fall. Though the former Minister at Prague was recalled as envoy by the State Department immediately after Hitler entered the city, the Carrs plan to remain in Europe all spring and summer instead of returning here. They will travel about from country to country, as they nearly always did during their vacations when Mr. Carr was stationed with the department.

ABOUT THE TOWN: Harry Villard and George Abell learning some interesting things about their characters from Roma Reid, the clever graphologist now practicing her art at the Shoreham . . . J. Edgar Hoover dining at Normandie Farms with an attractive woman companion . . . Belle Johnson, just back from New York, lunching at L'Escargot and wearing a smart brown wool frock with a cape of brown and white checks . . . Peggy Townsend, Queen of the Cherry Blossom Festival, ordering tea and popovers at Normandie Farms.

Miss Townsend will wear at the ceremonies today a long, full-skirted dress of gray marquisette, with bands of cyclamen trimming just the color of a cherry blossom in full bloom. Her shoulder-length bob will be crowned with a wreath of the flowers . . . Japanese Ambassadors to this country, who used to be asked by the photographers to parade for hours under the blossoms, no longer figure in the cherry festivals. At the moment the current envoy and Mme. Horinouchi are in Cuba, where the Ambassador is also accredited.

RUMOR says that royalty automatically expects long dresses to be worn at garden parties given in its honor, contrary to general custom in this country. Many optimistic Washingtonians are already mentally putting a jacket over one of their evening dresses in hopes of being presented to the King and Queen if such an event should be given for the royal pair.

SO THAT their French and German subjunctives won't get rusty, a number of enterprising women, most of them diplomats' wives, meet regularly every week to converse in these languages over luncheon. The French group has Mme. Lucet, of the French Embassy, to serve as watchdog over grammar, and includes Mme. Wennerberg, wife of the Swedish Counselor; Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, whose husband is with The Netherlands Legation; Mrs. Lewis Clark and Mrs. Edward Page, of the State Department, and Frau Blankenhorn, wife of a German Embassy Secretary.

On Mondays meets the German group, with Frau Blankenhorn to correct mistakes. Europe Lacks Glamour, Says Returned Traveler

Mrs. Willson, President of Mothers' Health Association, Says That Old World Has Lost Its Former Charm

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Europe today has no glamour, according to Mrs. Prentiss Willson, who has just returned from an eight-week trip, which took her to Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, France and Italy. It was her first visit and she failed to find the charm of the Old World described by travelers in former years. There is a tenseness in the atmosphere which robs it of whatever glamour it may have had before, she says.

Mrs. Willson, president of the Mothers' Health Association, arranged her return so as to be able to preside at its annual meeting, which will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Textile Museum. Mrs. Donald Roberts is chairman of the program to follow the business meeting. There will be the showing of a film on the subject of birth control with which the association is concerned, and tea will be served afterwards.

Comes Home With Gold Cargo

Mrs. Willson arrived in New York three days ago, aboard the Noordam, of the Holland-America Line, which carried a cargo of $25,000,000 in gold, $10,000,000 from Holland and the balance from England, picked up at a lighthouse off Plymouth, while the passengers gathered on the decks as interested spectators—all sent to this country for safe keeping.

Mrs. Willson and her cousin, Miss Pauline V. Hayden, of Winchester, Mass., who was with her, went abroad as tourists and not as students of conditions there.

Either the fact that it was the winter season or the uncertainty caused by the European crisis had resulted in a dearth of American tourists, she said. During the entire time she was there she met but two.

She found Holland the most interesting of the countries she visited, and less affected by the events of the past weeks than the other countries. The people enjoyed talking about Queen Wilhelmina, who goes bicycling and skating unattened, and is an altogether democratic ruler. The children of the country, including the little Jewish refugees, play with paper dolls made to resemble the baby Princess of the Netherlands.

Sees How Laws Work in Paris

In Paris, Mrs. Willson came up against the social laws, which give workers one day off. She had a light breakfast at her hotel on a Sunday morning and learned no other meals were to be served that day. There were restaurants where other days of the week than Sunday were the days off, but instead of allotting the days to different employes, it appeared that all activities ceased for everybody on a given days at a designated establishment.

Venice was cold and rather bleak, she said, and even the gondolas were not painted.

On the ship coming home, she had opportunity to learn much of conditions in Germany from the passengers, 85 per cent of them refugees, coming to America. It was a slow boat with but 129 passengers aboard, among them 11 Americans and one Englishman. He and the Americans held classes every day, to help the refugees learn a smattering of English which would help them when they reached this country. Mrs. Willson taught one group. Most of them had been in concentration camps, some because they were Jews, and others who were not but who had expressed democratic ideas or refused to conform to some of Hitler's decrees.

While Mrs. Willson was in Europe, Dr. Willson went to Florida for a fishing trip.

There, he studied with two leading Orientalis, W. W. Rockhill, who was then American Minister, and Dr. Charles D. Tenney, Legation secretary, and a noted Chinese scholar. After a period of government service in Shanghai, he entered the employ of the Chinese Ministry of Finance, in the salt revenue department and, in this capacity, served many years in central China and Manchuria. For the past five years, he has been in Shanghai.

Following Dr. Gale's lecture, tea will be served with Mrs. John K. Griffith, of Louisiana; Mrs. George W. Gille, of Indiana; Mrs. Lyle H. Boren, of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Starling W. Cole, of New York, alternating at the tea table.

New Slipcovers For Spring

WONDER workers! That's what trim, colorful slip covers are! Waking up dull rooms, making old chairs, sofas look like new.

And so easy to stitch them up at home — inexpensively. You work the pin-on way and, as you work, follow simple tips to get that smooth-as-upholstery look.

Begin by smoothing your fabric over back and seat. Pin down every three inches where seams will be, cut 1½ inches outside pins.

The smaller sections you lay out the same way. So the seams between arm, wing and back will lie snug to the chair, slash the edges of the fabric a little.

So your material won't bunch where top and wings round, make little folds or darts.

Arm fronts you cut from patterns which you make easily yourself. To get the exact shape of the fronts, hold pieces of paper against them, mark the outlines with pencil and cut, allowing for seams. Clever to make such paper patterns for the wings, too.

How to put the sections together, stitch, finish seams? Our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," gives step-by-step directions, diagrams to guide you in making slip covers for any style chair or sofa. Tells how to estimate materials, gives pointers on fabrics, trimmings.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Leonard in Rare Form as Nats Beat Reds, 9-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 30.—"That fellow," said Tommy Connolly, "was the best friend the umpires in the American League ever had." He was pointing to a large figure besieged by autograph hunters in the Nats' hotel lobby. He was pointing to Walter Johnson, who used to be a pitcher.

POVICH

And in case you are wondering who Tommy Connolly might be, he is the little gentleman who was umpiring ball games in the American League when your grandpappy was whistling the new song hit "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." After a fashion, Tommy Connolly is still an umpire. He judges the work of the 13 umps who work for the American League. He's Mr. Will Harridge's umpire-in-chief and on Mr. Connolly's say-so umpires are hired and fired by the American League.

And why, Mr. Connolly, was Johnson such a good friend of the umpires?

"Well, we never had to worry much when he was pitching. If we blew a strike and called it a ball, it was all right, nobody fussed. Because Walter would come down the middle with his next pitch and no harm was done."

Remember That Game in Detroit?

Spotting Connolly in the lobby, Johnson sauntered over, extended his hand and smiled broadly. "Hello, Tommy," he said. "Remember that game in Detroit?"

"I knew you were going to ask me that," said Connolly returning the grin. And then by way of explanation to the little group standing about, he added, "Walter always asks me if I remember that game in Detroit. That was the day I blew a couple of decisions for him. You tell 'em about it Walter."

Johnson covered his face with his hands to suppress a loud laugh even before he began to reminisce. "It was this way," he said. "I hadn't been in the American League more than a couple of weeks. It was back in 1907 and we were playing the Tigers at Detroit. There was a man on base and like a big boob I made a false motion to throw to first before I stepped on the rubber.

"Every Tiger on the field ran toward Tommy yelling 'balk!' Tommy simply shook his head and sent 'em back to their positions. A couple of pitches later, I did the same thing—made a motion to throw to first again before I stepped on the rubber. Those Tigers really let Tommy have it this time. For five minutes they yelled 'balk!' 'balk!' But Tommy didn't allow it. You tell 'em why, Tommy."

"Well," smiled Connolly, "I figured there must be something wrong the second time. What I didn't know was that a pitcher could be so dumb about pitching. I never imagined that this big countryman didn't know enough to stand on the rubber. I was giving him credit for sense that he didn't have."

Johnson Is Paradox

In the Washington training camp, Radio Commentator Walter Johnson is something of a paradox. He is not sharing the enthusiasm of the Nats' bosses for the February phenoms on the Washington pitching staff. "A year away," "two years away," and "three years away," is the way he is describing the young pitchers whom Bucky Harris believes are ripe to carry the burden for the Nats. Despite his own sensational debut in the big leagues and the fact that he took his place as a star from the day that he first stepped on the mound for Washington, he does not enthuse easily over young pitchers.

"They've got to find themselves," he says. "You can't make a pitcher in a year or two. There's too much to learn about pitching. I found that out. Some of the lads here may be fine pitchers—in a couple of years. They ought to be, the way they are being treated."

Just what did Mr. Johnson mean by that.

"Well, they've been in camp two months now and none of 'em has pitched more than six innings. They aren't being pushed. Back about 25 years ago I reported to Washington's camp at Galveston, Tex., on a Thursday and on a Sunday I pitched a 1-0 nine-inning exhibition game."

And there was that little matter of shutting out the New York Yankees three times in four games, Mr. Johnson.

"That Was a Mistake"

"That was a mistake. I wasn't supposed to do that. It was back in 1908 and Joe Cantillon was managing the club. Some newspaper men came down to our bench before the game on Friday and asked Joe Cantillon who was going to pitch that day. Cantillon said, 'well, Johnson seems to be going pretty good.' I was just a young kid and I thought that meant I was supposed to pitch and I grabbed the ball and started warming up. Cantillon let me go on and I shut the Yankees out with six hits.

"The next day was a Saturday. The same newspaper men came to the bench and asked Cantillon who his pitcher would be. Joe said he didn't know, but he looked at me. I grabbed the ball again and went in there and he didn't stop me. I shut 'em out with four hits.

"We laid over on Sunday because of the Sunday law, but on Monday Cantillon didn't have anybody ready to pitch. There were sore arms on the club and I was the only healthy pitcher on the staff. Joe didn't have the nerve to ask me to pitch again, but he gave me one of those appealing looks. I shut the Yankees out with two hits. Cantillon gave me the next day off."

On the Line

With Considine

New York, March 30.—Have you had your irony today?

Then consider the golf tournament now being waged at Augusta. The Masters Tournament it is called. It was conceived and is annually run by Bobby Jones. It was formed primarily to bring together, in a kind of class reunion, all the boys who, with Jones, made up the great fabric of tournament golf near the end of the golden era of sport.

CONSIDINE

It was to be a tournament of memories, and chuckling in the locker room, and an open bottle and a nostalgic song. In a sense, too, it was to be a memorial to Jones himself—and that still-amazing feat of winning the American Open and Amateur and the British Open and Amateur in one and the same year. And as much, though this was not necessarily Bobby's idea, it was to preserve the Jones reputation down through the years.

But as it has turned out it has done more to erase the glamour of the name Jones, in golf, than any single tournament. For in keeping with the social air of the meeting, Jones comes out of his hibernation each year.

Better Be Forgotten Man

And the young pros, coming along with those amazing latter-day scores, see a chubby and jovial young businessman shooting in the high 70's—followed by enormous crowds, giving off sympathetic tsk tsk tsks every time he blows a putt.

Can this be Jones, the young pros and the short-memoried galleryites inquire. Can this be the man who did those supernatural things on a golf course, who as an amateur put to rout all the great pros of his day? Look at him hook that one in the weeds. Look here, buddy, here's how it is really done. Keep your chin behind the ball and . . .

So you don't hear much of Jones' bygone heroics since the pleasant rendezvous at Augusta was started. You don't hear much more of his infinite skill. When you see his name these days it is usually in connection with one of the hot-handed young pros. They print the young man's scores in some tournament and remind you that if Jones—even the Jones of 1930—had played in the tournament he would have finished miles behind. In other words the Masters Tournament has drawn comparisons, all of them odious. And they've tended to render futile and archaic the scores and skill by which one of the greatest individual efforts in the history of sports was achieved.

The Following Mob Doesn't Help

We dropped over to see Alex Morrison, the most articulate pro of them all, to ask him about this phenomena. He shrugged. "It was inevitable that this would happen to Jones," he said. "He hasn't been mentally keyed up for any of the masters tournaments. Physically, he's been okay. But that's only a part of good golf. I guess it hasn't helped him either to have a mob following him around, mumbling 'Calamity Jane has failed him.'

"Sure golf has gotten better. It has gone ahead and left Jones because that was his wish. He would have been right up there today with the Sneads and the Picards and Guldahls if he had remained in competition. Maybe he would still have been the best because I think he probably would have continued to improve the technique of his game. That's where he had it on the other fellows, back in 1930. I believe that was the first year he really and truly hit the ball absolutely properly. The pictures show that, when you compare them with his 1929 form.

To my mind he was the only fellow had it; he and sometimes Sarazen and Hagen. Now, there are 10 or 15 kids who know as much as Jones alone knew in 1930. That's why the game has improved. It hasn't been equipment or better greens or anything else you read about. It is technique. Jones was just grasping it when he retired. Now a lot of them have what he had, even to keeping their chin behind the ball."

Alperstein, Intercollegiate Titlist, Beaten

2 Cardinals, Lone Cavalier Are Victors

Stant, Barksdale, Bunsa Survive First Round in Ring Tournament

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Madison, Wis., March 30.—Ben Alperstein, University of Maryland's national featherweight champion, was the victim of a first-round upset in the lightweight class here tonight as the fifth annual N. C. A. A. boxing tournament opened with an all-day program for 63 competitors.

Alperstein was one of three entries from the District of Columbia and Virginia and Maryland area that were eliminated. The others were Catholic University's light-heavy Jay Turner, and Virginia's Truman Southall, 155-pounder.

Rooters for the Southern contingent found solace, howevre, in the victories of three representatives, two from Catholic U. and one from Virginia. Fred Stant and Joe Bunha, the Cardinals' larruping 165 and 155-pounders, respectively, scored fairly easy decisions, and Ashby Barksdale, Cavalier 145-colorbearer, climbed off the floor to win his first start.

One of Few Kayoes

Turner's knockout by Jack Sill, Louisiana State University, was one of the few of the card. It was accomplished in 1:48 of the second round after the C. U. boy had built up a comfortable margin. He became careless in the second heat, dropped his guard momentarily, and paid full penalty for his lapse.

Alperstein, who won the Southern Conference title after stepping up 10 pounds, was Rankin's second victim of the day. Alperstein, a clever boxer and troublesome puncher, gained a slight edge in the first two rounds but appeared to tire rapidly before the Wisconsin's fast belated attack. Rankin won the nod of the referee and both judges.

Stant, beetle-browned C. U. standard bearer, defeated William Klause, Loyola, of the South, while Bunsa, who is coming back after an illness which threatened to terminate his ring career last season, beat another Loyola boy, Ed Harvey. Both boys threw heavy punches occasionally, but relied principally on their boxing skill.

Stont Wins Again

Refreshed after a few hours of rest, Stant returned late in the evening to register his second victory by outpointing John Schwartz, of Montana State, to reach the semi-finals.

Barksdale staged one of the outstanding rallies of the day to nip Clarence Esterle, Superior Teachers College. Smashed to the canvas by a terrific right-hand shot in the second, the game Cavalier swarmed back with a devastating two-fisted attack to catch the officials' eye. He had a share in the opening heat.

Southall's loss to Woodrow Swancutt came as somewhat of a surprise, inasmuch as the 155-pounder was considered, perhaps, the best member of Virginia's powerful ring squad.

Muddy Spray Fails to Mar Debut of Eastern Racing Season

Rain poured down at Bowie yesterday as if it were being paid by the year, but it failed to keep 7,000 racing addicts from the opening. Above, they're sliding into the stretch in the fourth race with Mystery Miss, who finished third in the lead. Eye High, the winner, is in second place. Left, is Jockey Eddie Smith after riding Mama's Bby in the third. Needless to say, he didn't win. Smith was even dirtier after the fourth for he took a tumble on Repsac

Rough Time Captures Inaugural at Bowie

Christmas Racer Wins Rowe Memorial in Mud as Eastern Racing Opens in Maryland And Rewards His Backers a $12.80 Ticket

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., March 30.—With native Maryland soil under his hoofs, Rough Time carried the white, red and green colors of J. Yancy Christmas, of the Upper Marlboro Christmases, to victory in the $5,000 added Rowe Memorial Handicap here today. The 6-furlong race was the feature of the first March program ever staged in this State and the debut of King Horse in the Eastern area.

It was only fitting that a horse named Rough Time should win the outstanding race on a card that found the favorite players roughing it most of the afternoon. It was not until the sixth race that backers of the public choices had a chance to cheer. Before that the shrieks of the longshot players making their kill echoed off the pine trees along the back-stretch.

The first racing in this sector since Charles Town closed last December served to lure a crowd of 7,000 despite conditions that were not of the best. The track was sloppy as the result of rain that set in last night. However, the conditions overhead improved as the program progressed.

Pays $12.80 Mutuel

Rough Time had a lukewarm backing among the fans and paid a $12.80 mutuel while running the 6 furlongs in 1.13 1-5, good time over this track.

The Bomar Stable's Benjam and not Wise Prince, Honey Cloud or Airflame, was the second horse in the field of 10. In fact, the well-played trio did not have a member in the money circle. Old Rosebush, fresh from New Orleans racing, was third.

The victory, with the $4,575 first money, was a glorious one for Owner Christmas.

Rough Time's likeable owner told friends of a rather disastrous trip to Oaklawn in the secretary's office yesterday. A promising 2-year-old owned by Christmas died as the result of the trip and Rough Time was beaten at the Arkansas track.

The Rowe Memorial winner is truly a Horatio Alger horse. Sired by Grand Time, a horse purchased

Borican to Rely On Air Speed to Get to Two Meets

Elizabeth, N. J., March 30 (AP).—John Borican, Negro sensation of the indoor track season, must put on plenty of speed to run in two meets this week-end.

After racing in Portland, Ore., Friday night, he'll take a plane for Newark Airport, hoping to arrive in time to participate in the State A. A. U. track championships here Saturday night. He is entered in the 600 and 1,000 yard runs.

Champs Repeat In Swim Events

Columbus, Ohio, March 30 (AP).—Contestants stuck to the form charts tonight in the first four events of the National A. A. U. indoor swimming championships at the Ohio State University pool, three defending titleholders repeating their 1938 victories, and the champion Buckeye team taking the lead in points.

Three more events are slated Friday and three Saturday.

Repeat winners were Peter Fick, of the New York Athletic Club, in the 100-yard free style; Al Patnik, of Ohio State, in the one-meter board fancy diving, and Andy Clark, of the Detroit Athletic Club, in the 300-yard individual medley.

The other championship, the 150-yard back stroke, went to Adoph Kiefer, of Texas, swimming unattached. He succeeds Al Vande Weghe, of Princeton, who was unable to compete because of influenza.

Estalella's Homer, Triple Pace Mates

Circuit Blow Sets a Tinker Field Record; Haynes Also Pitches Good Ball as Relief

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 30.—The pitching finesse of Dutch Leonard and Joe Haynes, and the batting violence of Bobby Estalella fetched a 9-to-2 victory for the Nats today over the Cincinnati Reds and terminated Washington's tender little three-game losing streak.

For the Nats it was a happy wedding of their finest pitching performance of the season and their lustiest batting attack, generated chiefly by the compact little Cuban, who regaled the 666 Tinker Field customers with his terrific hitting display.

While Leonard and the rookie Haynes were restricting the Red menace to five lonesome hits, Estalella was clouting the Nats home at the expense of two of the National League's better pitchers, Lefty Lee Grissom and the redoubtable Paul Derringer.

Powerful Hitting

He made only 2 of the Nats' 12 hits in his three official times at bat, but they were no bunts. His first offering, against Grissom in the third inning, was an echoing three-bagger into leftfield that paved the way for two Washington runs. His second offering deserves a separate paragraph.

Derringer was pitching when the little Cuban came to bat in the eighth with the Nats in the midst of a six-run uprising and Jake Early on base. Derringer pitched Estalella a high hard one and instantly realized his mistake. Turning loose his 185 pounds against the pitch, Bobby sent it arching in a high parabola over Center Fielder Harry Craft's head, and when last seen it was clearing the hedge fence 450 feet away and heading for Lake Lorna Doone and a watery grave.

It was a home run, the longest ball ever socked in the long history of Tinker Field, according to the oldest inhabitants of the press box.

Leonard and his knuckler almost completely befuddled the National Leaguers. The big fellow's butterfly ball was playing its most approved tricks and he was crossing them up with a new display of speed. The 2 runs the Reds did make in the six innings he toiled were very much tainted. A bit of shoddy play by Charley Gelbert at shortstop figured in their first run, and the strange phenomenon of Buddy Myer making two errors on the same play accounted for their second run against Leonard.

Haynes Holds Reds

Young Joe Haynes did nothing to disturb the belief that he is headed for distinction in his first season with the Nats. He relieved Leonard after the sixth and in three innings the calm of the proceedings was disturbed only by Lonnie Frey's single. In contrast to his wildness on a former appearance, Haynes walked only one batter and sealed his performance by striking out the last hitter.

Grissom, one of the pitchers who is supposed to help win the pennant for the Reds this season, did not exactly hold any terrors for the Nats. They packed three singles into the second inning—hits by Myer, Gelbert and Leonard—to knock him loose from 1 run, and in the third they rattled three more hits off his pitching to take a 3-to-0 lead.

Duddy Lewis opened that third inning with a single to right and Estalella then began to busy himself. His first act was to knock his triple into left field and scored Lewis. He crossed the plate himself when Frey lost Buddy Myer's high bounder in the sun.

Reds Reduce Nats' Lead

The Reds cut the Nats' lead to 3 to 1 in the fourth after Leonard walked Frey, but they had to have the help of two cheap hits through Gelbert's sector, and in the fourth after Pinch-hitter Gamble doubled, they cut the Nats' lead to 3 to 2. That run came about because Buddy Myer, after first fumbling Frey's grounder, made a wild throw to first with the ball.

There was a stretch of four in-

Rangers Stay In Race for Hockey Title

By the United Press.

Boston, March 30.—The New York Rangers remained in the battle for a Stanley Cup final berth by defeating the Boston Bruins, 2-1 in an overtime hockey game before a crowd of 16,409 in Boston Garden.

Center Clint Smith took a double relay from Babe Pratt and Lynn Patrick to score the winning goal for Rangers with less than three minutes of the first "sudden death" session left.

It was the Rangers second straight win over Boston, and cut the Bruins advantage in the best-of-seven series to one game.

The end came suddenly as both teams waited for a break. Patrick worked the puck inside the Bruins blue line and passed over to Pratt, who centered to Smith. Smith's smash landed low in the left corner for the payoff at 17:19.

Red Wings Defeat Maple Leafs, 3 to 1

Detroit, March 30 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings scored three times in the opening period and then fought off the Toronto Maple Leafs the rest of the way to win a 3-to-1 decision tonight in a National Hockey League playoff contest.

Detroit's victory squared Series D at one game each. The teams will play the deciding game at Toronto Saturday night, with the winner moving into the Stanley Cup finals against the victor of the Boston-New York Ranger series.

The Red Wings and Maple Leafs staged the hardest kind of a battle, featured by terrific body checking and furious skating on the part of both clubs, before 11,835 spectators.

Farber Is Elected W. & L. Swim Captain

Lexington, Va., March 30 (AP).—Brent Farber of Baltimore has been elected captain of the Washington and Lee swimming team for next season. Farber, who specializes in the dash events, placed second in both the 100 and 220-yard events in this year's Southern conference meet.

Hitler Name Bars Speedy Turtle From Big Race

Detroit, March 30 (I.N.S.).—Hitler, a fast-breaking, speedy and consistent turtle, was barred today from the fourth annual University of Detroit Turtle Trudge because of his name.

Only if the turtle's owner changes Hitler's name to something more acceptable in this land of the free can he go to the post in the important stake here.

Announcing their ban, the board of stewards explained:

"Supposing he should win and be entered in the forthcoming intercollegiate trudge, other colleges might not want to enter their thoroughbreds against a turtle named Hitler."

Henry Cotton's 75 Retains Golf Lead

Bournemouth, Eng., March 30 (AP).—Henry Cotton fired a 75 into the teeth of an easterly gale today, to retain the lead in the £2,000 ($9,400) Daily Mail Golf Tournament, with a 36-hole score of 144. Cotton shot a 69 over the tough Queens Park course yesterday.

Best score of the second round was the 70 turned in by Reg Whitcombe, British open champion, which gave him a total of 151. Among those between him and Cotton were young Dai Rees, with 75-72—147; Charles Whitcombe, 71-76—147, and Archie Compston, 73-75—148. Alf Padgham was tied with Reg Whitcombe on 76-75—151.

Pit Terrier Comes From Behind to Win Tropical Feature

Pays $28.50; Greentree Is Second

Winner's Stretch Drive Scores by 4 Lengths After Stears Folds Up

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., March 30.—Pit Terrier, 3-year-old owned by Louis Stroube and I. J. Collins, scored his second victory in six starts this year today when he came from far back to capture the six-furlong feature at Tropical Park.

No better than fifth in the run to the top of the stretch, the son of Bull Dog put on a burst of speed that carried him to the judges four lengths in front of Twist, from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable. A. G. Tarn's Canadian-owned Joharie, heavily played, lost runner-up honors by a head after trailing sixth in the field of seven in the early running.

Stears was away in front, but Donna Lopez quickly assumed command and held sway going into the final drive. Both gave way as the three money winners closed fast and Miss Happy came up to take fourth.

As a rank outsider, Pit Terrier paid $28.50 for $2. He was clocked in the good time of 1:11 3-5.

Fast Time Made By Buffalo Bill

Louisville, Ky., March 30 (AP).—Buffalo Bill, William E. Smith's Kentucky Derby candidate, galloped a mile in the mud at Churchill Downs today in 1:48 3-5—the most impressive trial recorded by a Derby nominee here so far this season.

Accompanied by Miss Sarah, Buffalo Bill stepped the first quarter in 26 seconds flat, the half in 0:51¾, and the three-quarters in 1:18 3-5.

Clockers caught Timeful, another Derby eligible, breezing seven-eighths of a mile 1:23. Two other candidates—Viscounty and Lightspur—were timed in 0:36 4-5 and 0:40 3-5, respectively, for three-eighths, breezing.

JAMES PAL came through on inside to take command going to first turn, was steadied along when LINA'S SON went to front under hustling tactics and responded to urging to draw out. EARLY TIMES, off sluggishly, came with good energy in closing quarter. IDLE ELF was forward factor throughout. JADAAN made up ground from slow beginning. CHIEF CHEROKEE was pinched back going to turn and tired.

Daily Double, Pimlico Queen and James Pal, Paid $394.20

LIGHT CHATTER, allowed to settle into stride and far back in early stages, came through on inside to better position with bold rush, came out from rail and under strong handling, won going away. NANSEMOND, forwardly placed from start and closed gamely under pressure. CORNWALLIS raced ISAIAH into defeat to take lead, but weakened right at end. ISAIAH took early lead, but weakened gradually through the stretch.

EYE HIGH, in the thick of contention from break, responded to urging to dispose of MYSTERY MISS and barely lasted. CHALMAC, off poorly, gained steadily and closed with rush under strong handling. MYSTERY MISS assumed command at once, opened a good lead, but weakened suddenly in closing eighth. ACE CALL, away slowly, saved ground, but weakened after reaching serious contention. REPSAC tripped and fell.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Rowe Memorial Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:37½. Winner, J. Y. ROUGH TIME, hustled to front going to turn, drew out gradually after disposing of AIRFLAME, but had to be placed to punishment in closing stages. BENJAM lacked speed for three furlongs, came through on inside to better position and closed with good courage to be wearing down winner. OLD ROSEBUSH was keen factor to stretch and was tiring at end. BUNNY BABY came with bold rush entering stretch, but hung in closing. WISE PRINCE went evenly and had no excuses. HONEY CLOUD was not a factor. AIRFLAME set early pace and dropped out of it suddenly.

TOPEE, forwardly placed and steadied along to backstretch, disposed of L'ENVOI to get to front, shook off SOARING HIGH and was placed to strong drive to draw out in closing stages. BEACON ROCK went forwardly, was blocked leaving backstretch and closed gamely, but was held safe. GRAND PAGEANT, fractious at the post, was off poorly, went around horses to gain contention and weakened in final eighth.

FRANCO SAXON, steadied along while racing with ODDESA LAD in opening stages, drew out to good lead, but had to be put to pressure to barely last. BRANDON PRINCE, allowed to settle into best stride, responded after being shaken up and closed with rush to just miss. ROWES CRUMP moved up menacingly in stretch, but hung. LADY ROMA weakened after getting to leaders.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al: I'm going to let Clocker Mike rest today and go in for some news. Trainer Ned Gaines, who saddled 17 winners at New Orleans, shipped in 6 horses yesterday and sent 15 more to Charles Town to await the 48-day session there. Jockey Willie Nertney has left the employment of the Millsdale Stable and will ride as a free lance. Jockey Lou Machado, of half-mile fame, got in from Hot Springs. He has returned to his riding job with C. M. Feltner, the horse ambassador from Berryville, Va. Mike Grant brought in Hi-Swing and several other platers from Timonium. G. R. Bryson has arrived with a string from New Orleans. He now has 25 horses in training. Clem McCarthy, of radio fame, was a first-day visitor. Max Smart transferred 14 horses from our Benning, D. C., track, where his charges wintered. The trainer for the late Admiral Cary T. Grayson has 10 more to be ready at Havre de Grace. Harry Stevens 3d, of the concessionaries family, reports that his wife has presented him with a son. Sammy Palumbo, the Charles Town champion, has not put in appearance, and probably will not start riding until Pimlico. The Maryland Racing Writers' Gruen watch award will be made as usual to the leading jockey at the spring meetings. Jockey C. Stevenson won last fall. Pimlico has installed a new photo-finish camera. Tiger Sam reports that he is in the hands of the loan sharks again. Tells of having been bawled out for slow payments after giving $11 interest on an $8 touch. Art Brown, of WOL, entertained in the clubhouse. Leave it to Bowie to draw the bad weather. Many of the first-day customers forgot to make a note of the 2:30 p. m. post time and were out early.

BILL.

First race—Irene's Bob showed speed with fair platers in Florida but failed to stick it out; stands out as the class and should go well in Bowie's mud. Eva R closed well sprinting at Oaklawn and gets a good figure. Miss Oak beat cheap ones at New Orleans; may surprise.

Second race—Match Point won his last three at Oaklawn and is reported better than ever by Trainer Vic Noyes. Fyan is making his first start this spring but has shown creditable workouts. Sea Gull should make strong contention if fit.

Third race—Anticosti, in the only start of his career was second to Solar Flight last summer. Trained by Frank Garrett he figures to be fit and ready and is easily the class of the field. Little Harpist has been actively campaigned in Florida with creditable results; likes this track. Blazearound raced well in fair company last year; chance for show.

Fourth race—Pharabelle easily bested better grade platers at Santa Anita recently and gets high figure here. Trained by the veteran, H. G. Bedwell, she should be ready. Sure Miss, a winner twice in Florida, promises to offer the contention. Fair Rock has mud-running abilities.

Fifth race—Fight Back showed improvement in recent Florida races and has been freshened up and pointed for this event. Reported fit and should go well in the mud. Knight Warrior was third in good company in Florida; appears next best. Panorama is in excellent form but is over her head.

Sixth race—Mon Doit raced well with horses of this caliber at Oaklawn, showing consistency and speed. A beaten favorite last outing, he appears the best here. Suncrax can win it if he runs his race but is temperamental and hard to figure. Petit Jean could take it all on old-time form, but recent efforts have been poor.

Seventh race—Chancing had early speed and held on well with a cheap field in Florida, has been consistently in the money and should be ready for a winning effort. Turkish Brand has shown little but comes from a smart outfit and doesn't meet much in this. Popo gets a fair figure but is making his initial start of the year.

Best bet—Anticosti.

Several Changes Slated for Cup Events; Keefer Play Opens Season

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

With every tournament excepting the Corby Cup changed from last year's method of play, the District Women's Golf Association's 1939 schedule was released yesterday, with the Maryland and Middle Atlantic championships slated over local courses one of its most attractive features.

The principal change centers around the annual competition for The Washington Post Trophy, heretofore a week-long match play event that has been cut to a one-day medal tournament October 3 over the Chevy Chase course.

The card is a duplicate of the last three years in the number of tournaments, but with The Post Cup cut from six days to one, the Star from two to one and the Times-Herald cups combined into one day, the playing time is actually seven days less.

All Play in This Area

District women golfers will have an opportunity to play in the District, Middle Atlantic and Maryland State tournaments without moving out of the metropolitan area for the first time in history, with the city championship slated at Columbia, the Maryland at Congressional and the Middle Atlantic over the Washington Golf and Country Club course, a fall event.

Major or minor changes affect every event excepting the Corby Cup. The season will open in the usual fashion at Washington with play for the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial event, that is not an association tournament, but is recognized on the calendar.

Play for the Mrs. Frank R. Keefer Cup at Chevy Chase is officially the inaugural competition over the two-day route, but only the low 32 and ties will qualify for the final day's play, April 27, the latter an innovation to the play.

Maryland Title at Congressional

The Maryland State championship follows at Congressional, May 16-20, while the Times-Herald events have been combined into one day's play over the Kenwood and Woodmont courses, for low and high handicap trophies.

The District title play has been altered with a second flight of 16 instead of 8, while the Duffers will find only the 16 and over handicap golfers playing, with no prizes for the topnotchers.

The Star follows, over the 18-hole route instead of 36, while the Corby Cup remains the same. The Post Cup is placed in a prominent spot on the fall card, the first tourney of its kind ever played at Chevy Chase, with the Middle Atlantic and team field day tourneys concluding the card.

Intercity matches, two with Baltimore on the home-and-home basis and a two-day affair in Philadelphia, are prominent attractions for the low-handicap linkswomen.

Two fall dates have been held open for the N. B. C. tournament and a combined get-together of the Maryland and District associations, while club one-day invitation events are also expected to be added.

Mrs. Frank Karamer, Indian Spring, and Association President Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, Columbia, released the card.

Mixed scotch foursome dates for the Maryland and District Golf associations have been reserved, while an entire week was set aside for club championships and the national championship in Noroton, Conn.

When Miss Dettweiler was five down at the fourteenth, she rallied and won two consecutive holes with birdies, but the former national champion had built up too large a lead to be in real danger and after a half at 15, Mrs. Page won the sixteenth with a par three and ended the match.

In all Washington match in the consolation of the championship flight Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, defeated Mrs. Leo Walper, wife of a Washington professional, one up. This match was close all the way and the ladies were even at the eighteenth tee, where Mrs. Davy obtained a par four and won the hole. The cards:

Golden Terror Pins McCoy in Rassle Here

Hooded Marvel Wins 13th Straight Bout; Red Ryan Scores

The Golden Terror scored his thirteenth local victory in the mat feature at Turner's Arena last night, using a few well-placed blows to Bibber McCoy's jaw, plus a few jumps, to win in 19 minutes before 1,800 fans.

McCoy grabbed a stool from under a photographer after some 10 minutes of action but failed to use it effectively, and again had a chance when he pinned the masked terror. But the latter had his arm out of the ropes and the count was void.

The Terror tired of McCoy's tactics after 19 minutes and with punches and boots floored his opponent and pinned him for the decision.

Red Ryan scored over "Slammin" Hank Methany in the semiwindup, with a body slam after 17 minutes, and then grabbed the mike from Jimmy Lake's hands and demanded a match with Jack Hader next week, or he would be through with the mat game in Washington. Sounds like a build-up.

Meanwhile Jack Hader trimmed Gene Bowman with a crotch hold and body slam in 9 minutes, and Dr. John Murphy used his dropkick to subdue Alonzo Woods in 19 minutes.

It was Chief Chewaki and Ernie Powers turn for the weekly draw, in the regulation 30 minutes.

Rockville and Sherwood Girls Battle Tonight for Cage Title

Two Outstanding Teams Meet at 9 o'Clock in Post-A. A. U. Finals; Other Teams in Action

Fair basketball stars of Rockville and Sherwood collide tonight in what promises to be war on the court before one or the other is crowned 1939 champion of the Post-A. A. U. tournament.

At 9 o'clock, the ardent rivals will square off on the Eastern High gymnasium floor and for the next hour some of the best basketball seen in girls' ranks this season is expected.

Rockville will be a slight favorite. The Montgomery County girls have not been defeated since 1937, and will be seeking their third straight District A. A. U. title. Sherwood, composed of younger girls, is an up-and-coming team which has gained the finals in an even easier fashion than Rockville.

Sherwood downed Federal Trade Commission with little trouble and proved too much for Hattysville in the semifinals. Rockville defeated Rural Electrification and was pressed to turn back Mount Rainier in the semifinals.

With one of the best girls' teams ever to play in this section, Rockville has veterans in every position. On the scoring end, Rockville depends on the "three smart girls," Margaret Lanier, Marguerite Howard and Audrey Nusbaum. Each of this trio is a virtual scoring machine and each has a specialty. Mrs. Lanier shoots like a boy on dribble-in shots. Mrs. Howard is the team's longshot artist. Mrs. Nusbaum shines from sidecourt.

But Sherwood has some polished forwards, too. Evelyn Lewis, Katherine Adamson and Ruth Hull have made the bulk of the club's points in the tournament and they are groomed to put the ball through the hoop tonight.

Coach Leroy W. Pickett, of Rockville, has had some of his girls at every Sherwood game during the tournament. On the other hand, Sherwood has "scouted" Rockville.

Small Score Seen

Close followers believe that the guarding will be such that a small score will decide the game. Both teams are formidable on the defense. Sherwood is considered strongest in guard positions, with Rockville having the edge on accuracy in shooting.

Despite the fact that there are two 135-pound semi-finals as well as a 105-pound final on the program, the usual admission fee of 25 cents will be charged.

It will be Washington against Alexandria in the 105-pound class championship game. The Alexandria Boys Club has proven a sensation in its class, having turned back the Southeast Cards, Police Boys Club and Bethesda. The Washington Boys Club Senators will be favorites, however. In their path to the finals, they downed nings in which the Nats made only one hit against Grissom and Derringer, but they caught up with Derringer in the eighth, and ten of 'em went to bat in a six-run spree before the big right-hander could negotiate the third out.

Jimmy Bloodworth and Ossie Bluege launched the uprising with a pair of infield hits that were nothing startling, but Wasdell set off some dynamite with a double to left that scored a run. Then the Reds, particularly Lombardi, helped out. On Haynes' grounder to Myers, Bluege attempted to score and then retraced his steps, winning a race to the bag with Catcher Lombardi and leaving the bases full.

At this point Rookie Jake Early rifled a two-bagger over first base and scored the second and third runs of the inning. George Case scored in the fourth with a long fly to center field, and then along came Estalella with that home run that the natives are still talking about.

Notes of the Nats—Bucky Harris chaperones his team toward the Florida West Coast for a four-day tour starting tomorrow . . . En route they will stop off at Lakeland for their fourth spring battle with the Tigers . . . thence to Bradenton to play the Bees, thence to Tampa for a Sunday game with the Reds, and thence to Clearwater to meet the Dodgers . . . Weighing all the performances of the Nats' pitchers thus far, Dutch Leonard has been a stand-out with his two appearances on the mound . . . Bill Werber failed to accompany the Reds to Orlando today . . . He is in Tampa nursing a bruised finger . . . Johnny Welaj's fly-catching is earning him increased respect in the Nats' camp and any time the Nats have a commanding lead he will find his way into the game as a defensive measure.

Masters Golf Tourney Off Until Today

Rain Postponed Event Third Time In Six-Years Play

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., March 30.—The "masters" of the royal and ancient game of golf assembled today for the start of the Augusta National $5,000 classic and the clouds unloosed a downpour, forcing the third postponement in play in the six-year life of the tournament.

Somehow the big event Robert Tyre Jones, jr., arranged for his lone competitive appearance, is "jinxed." In all the past five years it has rained on at least one round of play.

Starting a bit early in the downpour today, George Sargent, of Atlanta, the U. S. open champion of 1909, and Jock Hutchison, of Chicago, former British open titleholder, the first two-some, had reached the third hole when a runner advised them of the committee decision to delay the start until tomorrow.

The course was closed, so no one practiced.

Ralph Guldahl, the broad shouldered national champion from Madison, N. J., remained a top favorite along with Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., the winner here last year, and Sammy Snead, the long-knocking youngster from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Bettors could get only 8 to 1 on those fellows.

The biggest "lays" were 30 to 1 on Tommy Armour from Chicago, former national open champion. Armour, too, was considered a good "mudder."

Bobby Jones, himself rated only a 40-to 1 chance of finishing ahead. Jones' best effort was in the Inaugural Tournament when he tied for thirteenth.

Due to the postponement, the committee decided to play single 18-hole rounds tomorrow and Saturday, with 36 holes on Sunday.

Bob Feller and Willis Hudlin pitched for the Indians against Chubby Dean and Nelson Potter. Dean, who gave up two runs in his four-inning chore, was charged with the loss, the Athletics' fifth in 14 games.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

A line we always liked was written by Richard Harding Davis, the time Stanford White was killed by Harry Thaw in the Roof Theater of the old Madison Square Garden over Evelyn Nesbitt, then a young stage beauty and subsequently Mrs. Thaw.

RUNYON

We do not know how large the theater was, but the capacity must have been greater than that of the Yankee Stadium, judging from the number of persons who afterwards claimed they were present when the killing came off.

White was not only one of the greatest architects in the world but was also a noted playboy, or whatever they call a fellow-about-tables in those days. Thaw was the scion of an enormously wealthy Pittsburgh family. He is still living. So is Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw. She is a well-known cafe entertainer in the East.

At the time of the killing, Richard Harding Davis was the noted fiction writer of the day. He was a graduate of New York newspaper reportorial ranks and never completely dropped the role of reporter as long as he lived. Incidentally, he was a boon companion of White and when he was engaged by a New York paper to write of White and of the killing there was some curiosity as to

When a Harvard student swallows a goldfish it's only news to the fish. The higher education now includes the picketing of aquariums.

We've looked up the 1940 Olympics and cannot locate the event for which the Harvard man is training. The intellectual yardstick is a foot short when Harvard goes back on the goldfish standard.

The record is held by a Boston college junior with 29 straight fish. Graduation exercises for that fellow will consist of dangling a Royal Coachman under his nose.

Builders Need Program Says Sen. Bridges

Also States Need For a Definite Construction Plan

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A real and permanent recovery, aligned with the building industry, was envisioned last night by Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, addressing the second annual dinner of Washington Building Congress, at the Mayflower Hotel. Commending this organization for its aim—co-ordination of groups and businesses within the building field, he declared team work in the industry will lend a more encouraging color to the future, but warned its members they cannot depend on the Government for their construction program; that they must devise and execute it themselves.

In his address, "The Building Construction in the United States," Senator Bridges said private construction is a most important part of this activity, which is second greatest in the Nation, ranking slightly below agriculture from point of view of money spent. Reminding of a constant demand for housing with private industry waiting to supply it, he enumerated obstacles preventing co-ordination between consumer and producer and suggested means of removal.

The latter are reduction of the tax burden on real estate; realization that if building is to go forward it must do so through private enterprise; wooing of private investors back to private industry, and a better organization of the building industry to market its product. Once started, he emphasized, recovery in building will carry all other durable goods industries along with it.

More than 300 members and guests attended the dinner at which President Theodore Irving Coe presided. Hector M. Aring was master of ceremonies and Julian A. Brylawski in charge of entertainment. Irwin S. Porter, membership committee chairman, presented prizes to winners in a campaign increasing the organization's roster from 175 to nearly 400. Winners were J. R. Skinker, H. A. Cotton Futures Dip 3 to 6 Points

New York, March 30 (AP).—Cotton prices settled a little lower today as traders noted what seemed the beginning of a new conflict in Washington over methods for solving the cotton surplus problem.

Buyers and sellers moved warily in view of fresh uncertainity injected into the situation by the refusal of a group of Southern legislators to approve President Roosevelt's export subsidy program. Final prices were 3 to 6 points down. Bombay brokers sold May and July in early turnover with offerings absorbed by trade and mill account.

Sales totaled 174 lots: mal closed 6.71, July 6.87, September 7.00, October 7.03.

Crude oil was quoted in the Southeast and Valley at 5½ cents and in Texas 5¼@5¾.

Total for 22 Cities Is a Gain of 8.7% Over 1938 Week

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 30.—The volume of bank clearings for the latest week fell rather abruptly below the heavy turnover of the previous week, but continued to record an increase when compared with the like period a year ago. This marked the fourteenth consecutive week in which a year-to-year gain was registered.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended March 29, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $4,897,918,000, an increase of 8.7 per cent, compared with the $4,505,667,000 for the same week last year.

The drop from the volume for the preceding week amounted to $1,128,755,000. Between the two similar weeks of 1938, the decline was $682,085,000.

New York clearings totaled $3,050,033,000, against $2,778,816,000 a year ago, giving rise of 9.8 per cent, while the amount for 21 outside cities aggregated $1,847,885,000, or 7 per cent more than the $1,726,851,000 last year.

With the exception of declines at Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis and Dallas, all of the outside centers reported increases in clearings over those of a year ago.

Wheat Prices Advance in Dull Trading

Chicago, March 30 (AP).—Increased purchasing of wheat futures in the last half hour, credited partly to milling and export interests, helped to list prices about ½ cent today after the market had drifted one of its most lackadaisical sessions in weeks.

Nervousness over the European political outlook, emphasized by a break in securities, caused late short covering after scattered orders had disclosed a temporary scarcity of sellers at around 67½ for both May and July contracts.

Traders said some of the buying may have been based on the announcement of an extension of the areas in which producers who received loans on 1938 wheat may be permitted to obtain renewal or extension.

Stocks Close Lower as Result of Heavy Selling at the Close; U. S. Issues Drop on Bond List

New York, March 30.—A sudden wave of selling in a thin market caused consternation in the financial district today and in lieu of specific explanations regarding the cause the street entertained a dozen or more unconfirmed rumors of dire forbodings. The excitement was all packed in the final hour, with more shares sold in that period than during the first four hours of trading.

The close was at the lows for the day for virtually all pivotal stocks but the composite average, while losing 1.21 points for the session, did not quite break through to a new low for the year.

Figures on this composite, and the average of 70 industrials and 30 rails which go to make up the composite, are as follows for today, the 1939 low of January 26 and the Munich low of last September:

Market on Downtrend

Most followers of the Dow theory believe that a decisive penetration of the January 26 closing level, accompanied by active volume, would mean that the market has been in a major downtrend since November 10, 1938—the high point of the bull market.

Should this prove to be the case, then the bull market of 1938 will have been the shortest on record, having run only from March 31, 1938, to November 10. A few technicians and followers of the Dow theory expressed the belief today that they thought the Munich lows would have to be broken before a definite bear market has been signified. They based this on the assumption that our market has been subjected to foreign influences to an extent that might alter slightly the application of old rules of market trends.

High Points Level Off

Since the November 10 high the market has enjoyed two rallies and sustained three declines, including the present one. However, on each of the rallies the high points attained failed to equal the preceding high points.

Most active stock for the day was United States Steel, off 3 points, followed by United States Rubber, off 4, and General Motors, off 2⅝. Bethlehem lost nearly 4. Glenn Martin was the leader of the aviations, down more than 2, while Central led the rails with a drop of more than a point.

Losses of a few other speculative leaders included Telephone, 1¾; Atchison, 3; Consolidated Edison, 1⅛; duPont, 3⅜; Kennecott, 2¼; Sears, 1¼; Union Pacific, 4½, and Westinghouse, 2⅝.

Listed bond trading was a quiet affair, today, save for a last-hour drop in some of the speculative obligations. The sudden shift of sentiment sent many of the foreign bonds tumbling, and the more vulnerable domestic corporation issues also suffered. Declines were mostly fractional, however, as there was little rush to sell.

Turnover in all listed bonds was $6,370,000, which is somewhat better than earlier sessions of this week, but still a starvation diet for the bond brokers.

Treasury Issues Close Down

United States Treasury issues closed the formal session at 3 o'clock with gains to 9-32 point, and another series of new highs was established. Soon after the closing gong, prices drifted lower in the counter market, but just before desks were shut a rally took place, owing to the reports that excess reserves were sharply higher. Counter closings thus were just a shade under the official figures. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds held at former levels.

Rail Bonds Decline

Among secondary rail liens the tendency was downward, with those issues most affected in which a sizable speculative position is known to exist. Losses of a point or two were registered in a score of bonds, but others merely fell fractionally. The default and borderline rails dropped with the others. Holding company issues lost ground, and industrial convertibles melted with their related equities. Local traction bonds proved weak, as did international telephone obligations and other special groups.

Polish bonds drooped into fresh low ground on the reports of German pressure for adjustment of the Danzig question, while German bonds also fell. Italian, Hungarian, Serbian and other European obligations softened, regardless of interest or default status.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, March 30.—Stock prices faltered after early gains today, but closed around Wednesday's final quotations for better. Iron and steel shares moved higher in anticipation of increased orders, and motors, tobaccos and aircrafts improved. British funds finished unchanged and transatlantic moved up around a point. Continental selling depressed oils. Foreign bonds were quietly steady.

Paris—The bourse closed today with prices generally lower. Rentes lost 20 to 80 centimes and Suez Canal was off 250 francs. Royal Dutch and Bank of France were narrowly down.

Liverpool—Cotton futures trading was hesitant today pending some definite news of American export subsidy plans. Closing prices were unchanged to 2 net higher. A little buying by the trade and short covering absorbed scattered liquidation. Wheat futures ended unchanged to ¼d higher as miller's inquiry for cash wheat improved.

Time Business Index Shows Sharp Gain

New York, March 30 (AP).—In the sharpest rise in three months, the index of business conditions compiled by the magazine Time climbed last week to 95.6, a gain of 2.5 points or 2.7 per cent over the 93.1 figure for the preceding week, it was announced today. The index, with 1926 as 100, stood at 88.7 a year ago.

Increased spending in trading centers, where bank debits reached the highest figure for any week in 1939, was the principal factor behind the gain, the magazine said.

Brokers' Loans Drop $33,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $611,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $33,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $542,000,000.

International Paddle Stars Here Tonight

Hungarians Will Battle U. S. Players

Schiff Heads List Of Americans in Match Tonight

America meet Hungary in an international table tennis match at Heurich's gym tonight and for the third time in three years the Twenty-sixth and Water streets gym is expected to be packed by devotees of the game.

The first of five matches forming the team competition will start promptly at 8:15 o'clock. It is expected that Senator Rush D. Holt, of West Virginia, an ardent paddle enthusiast himself, will officiate as master of ceremonies.

It was onnounced last night that Sandor Glancz, known as the grand old man of table tennis (although he is but 30 years old), would appear to embellish the international competition with a special exhibition.

Following the last of the American-Hungarian encounters which will stop as soon as one team has won three, Glancz—another Hungarian, former champion of three European countries and possessor of the finest forehand in the game—will engage his fellow-countryman, Lazlo Bellak, in a display of table tennis at its best. Local officials say Glancz and Bellak still are the world's two best players, barring none.

Sol Schiff, America's No. 1 player, and Tibor Hazi, one of Hungary's rapidly-rising stars who defeated Schiff in the recent national tournament, will open the competitive part of the program with their singles match. Immediately following, Bellak, current co-holder of the world's doubles title and former American champion, will take on Izzy Bellis, America's youngest player now ripe for competition among the best. Bellis, a 20-year-old student of the University of Pennsylvania, is the Eastern champion and was the junior tennis champion of the country in 1935.

Match No. 3 on the program will be the lone doubles encounter of the night in which Schiff and Bellis will tackle Bellak and Hazi. It may be, of course, that this match will be the final of the American-Hungarian rivalry should one team sweep all three. If not, Schiff will play Bellak and Bellis will meet Hazi to complete the five.

Faces the Best of Europe's Table Tennis Corps Tonight

Sol Schiff, No. 1 ranking table tennis of the United States, shows the form he hopes will bring the American team out on top tonight in its competition with a Hungarian team at Heurich gym. Schiff will pair with Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia, and Hungary's contenders will be Tibor Hazi, Sandor Glancz and Lazlo Bellak

Conn. Ave. Ladies

Charlotte Wager had 121 and 297 n the Connecticut Avenue Ladies League at Ice Palace Alleys, while Jaybirds accounted for high team totals with 470-1,314.

Insurance

P. Campbell's 143 and 355 led the individual efforts of the Insurance League bowlers at Ice Palace Alleys, while Aetna had 577 and 1,693 to lead the teams.

Recreation League

With only two more weeks of competition remaining in the Department Store Bowling League, Woodward & Lothrop and Kann's still remained deadlocked for the lead. Last night's matches at Recreation alleys found Woodward's, paced by Billy Kingsolver's 385, whitewashing the Credit Bureau, while Kann's swept their set from Guy-Curran. Al Watson's 370 and Irwin Simon's 366 were high for the Avenue boys.

In other matches, Lansburgh's took the odd skirmish from the Hect Co., despite Mike Gass' 394. Jelleff's grabbed two from Hahn Shoes, while Raleigh Haberdasher took a 2-to-1 decision from Garfinkel's.

War Department League

Led by Jack Van Horn, Hydrographic put on one of its most impressive performances of the War Department League season at Arcadia by rolling second high game, 640, and second high set, 1,710. Van Horn posted a 160, second high individual set, and 378 for high individual set of the evening.

Federal Ladies League

Virginia Calvagno, R. F. C. No. 1, had high individual game, 131; Margaret Lynn, same team, high individual set, 342, and Federal Housing turned in high team game, 534, and high team set, 1,515, at Arcadia.

F. & D. Commerce Loses in Play-Offs

An uncertain Foreign and Domestic Commerce quintet dropped from consideration in the Government-Y. M. C. A. Basketball League playoffs last night when it was defeated, 35-18, by the G. A. O.-P. O. D. team at the "Y" gym. Wilmeth and Fransen paced the winners with 9 and 8 points, respectively.

On Fishing

Stream anglers have had April 1 marked off on their calendars for many weeks—and now it is here. Many are leaving today, particularly those who are going to open the season on western Maryland waters, as well as the anglers lucky enough to get a "bid" for one of the many private streams.

ACKERMAN

Cottie Willard's Camp on Big Fishing Creek will as usual be the Mecca for many, even though night fishing is out, and it won't be legal to wet a line until 5:30 Saturday morning. We hazard the guess the usual party will last until daylight instead of breaking up at midnight, and that sleeping space won't be at a premium for the simple reason no one will be allowed to crawl under the covers.

Here's a last minute thought for bait fishermen to take astream with them tomorrow. Catch the big ones and save the little undersized fish, by using the largest hook consistent with the size of the trout you think to be in the waters you are fishing.

Use Large Hooks

A small hook may not hold the big ones—and will catch more of the undersized fish, decreasing the chances of taking better trout next year. A big hook is too large for a fish under 7 inches—the legal size in Maryland. That statement isn't just a thought of ours either—it has been proved time and time again. A big hook is more certain of holding the large one; most big fish have been caught with large hooks.

In trout fishing, one doesn't fish for one's friends. Take only what you can use, even though the number is far below the limit of ten.

How trout fishermen who also are skeet shooters are going to make out over this week-end is more than we can understand, for the second annual "Mac" Hart shoot gets under way Saturday at 1 p. m., rain or shine, at the grounds of the National Capital Skeet Club, and continues through Sunday.

The woman's scratch and handicap championship will be the first event, and running concurrently with it the .410 gauge championship. Starting time of the 20-gauge handicap championship is 2:30 p. m. on on Sunday. At 9:30 a. m. the individual and two-man team championship are carded.

This shoot honors one of the best beloved sportsmen ever to come out of the Old Dominion. He has been following field and streams for nearly every one of his 70-odd years—his lifetime hobby and work, the conservation of the wildlife in them.

Wire from Bill Sharp, North Carolina Conservation Commission says, first channel bass of the season weighing 41 pounds caught off the beach at Hatteras. Commercial fishermen report them feeding in the surf on the lower beaches.

Explained Solunor Theory

John Alden Knight, author of "The Modern Angler," was a guest last evening of the Hagerstown Ike Waltons, and indulged the many angling members with a short talk on his Solunor theory; its origin, formation, manifestations, uses, and the probable cause of reaction of wildlife to "solunar" influence.

Many dyed-in-the-wool stream anglers in this section have been following his theory and tables for several years, and seem to find a lot in them. We know there is a very definite effect upon fish during certain phases of the sun and the moon (this holds true for game animals as well—upon humans, too, if we don't mind thinking back that far). But we have never followed Knight's tables as closely as we would have liked. However, that is the intention this season, and we would appreciated the findings of others following them.

Plumbers Take Loop Court Title

A 58-41 final score in its favor gave Atchison-Keller Plumbers the basketball championship of the Southeast Community Center League over D. C. Commissioners last night at the Junior High gym.

Wilson Earman, whose scoring throughout the season has kept the Plumbers on top, registered 18 points to pace the team's second consecutive triumph in the league title playoff. Thomas and C. Earman were second high for the winners with 14 points apiece. Mandes, of the Commissioners, also scored 18 points.

135-Pound Games

In the two 135-pound games, Eckington Bakery tackles Northeast Boys Club while the Stewart Brothers Photographers battle Police Boys Club. Stewart is a slight favorite to win in this class. The other game is a toss-up.

The Washington Post Trophies will be presented to the winners of the girls and 105-pound games. Tomorrow night will conclude the gigantic tournament with the 90, 120, 135 and 145 pound finals booked.

G.W. Rifle Champs Compete Today

George Washington University, defending champion in the national intercollegiate rifle tournament, will fight for its crown today in one of the three sectional shoots which will decide the titlist for 1939. The Colonials will fire at Annapolis, along with the Navy five which won the championship in 1937 and went through the past season without defeat.

The other two final matches will be staged in Chicago and Berkeley, Calif.

Only a few District teams have yet to bowl, and it appears the city will be without a champion unless Mabelle Hering gets a chance to roll off the women's singles tie. Baltimore entrants have completely dominated the event thus far.

Mid-Atlantic, 'Y' Swim Meet Set Tomorrow

Six States to Compete For Individual, Team Titles at Shoreham

Swimming enthusiasts of the District will be treated to the biggest tank display of the season tomorrow afternoon and night at the Shoreham Venetian pool, as about 200 crack water performers take part in the annual Mid-Atlantic-Y. M. C. A. championships. Qualifying heats are listed for 5:30 p. m., finals at 8:30.

Six States, including Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware, New York and Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia will participate in eight events to determine individual and team crown-bearers for the coming year.

The York, Pa., squad which has emerged triumphant for the past two years was seen to have a rocky road ahead if it expects to repeat. Scranton, Pa., with three present titleholders, will be favored in the diving, backstroke and free-style divisions, while Washington has a better than average chance for team honors with John Marshall, Morris Goldberg and Ernie Boggs in the line-up.

what he would have to say. He started off like this:

"I have no apologies to offer for Stanford White. He was my friend."

That was a good stand-up line, under the circumstances.

The killing of Stanford White was probably the biggest story in New York newspaper history until the Lindbergh kidnaping came along. The characters, the motive, the scene, and everything that went with it, made it terrific. We do not think any New York newspaper editor is morbid enough to want to see killings in any shape, manner or form, but we could scarcely blame them if they felt that if there must be killings, it would not be a bad idea if they always possessed all the elements of the Thaw-White affair.

The way that sold newspapers was a caution to cats. It held the front pages of the public prints on Manhattan Island longer than any other one story in history bar the big war and possibly the Lindbergh case. However, we intended this column more on Richard Harding Davis than the Thaw-White matter, because we recently had a letter from one of our younger readers with newspaper aspirations asking what we knew of Davis as a newspaperman.

Davis 'Greatest Observer'

We did not know him personally. When we got around as a newspaper cub, Davis was a lordly war correspondent as well as a famous author, and a small operator like us could not get close enough to him to hand him a ripe peach. However, we have asked veterans who were contemporaneous with him in the newspaper game, and one of them told us not long ago that in his experience covering 40 years, Davis was the greatest observer reporter he ever knew.

He said by that he meant a reporter of an event the reporter personally witnessed. He said he did not know how good a reporter Davis was on digging up news, but he had been told by the late Arthur Brisbane, who produced Davis on the Sun, that he was a first class all-around man, which was high praise from Brisbane.

The veteran said that no writer, newspaper or otherwise, quite like Davis ever lived. He said he was a big, handsome fellow, and a regular fashion plate in dress. The veteran declared that he had seen Davis when he was in his heyday followed by crowds along Broadway as if he were a heavyweight prize fighter. He said he supposed Davis was the glamour man of his era.

He made big money, and always got a raft of newspaper publicity, and was a sort of a symbol of his newspaper era. The veteran said it became a fashion in later years to gibe at Davis as a type, but that if you went to the trouble of looking up his newspaper work you would find that he was a mighty sound reporter, and certainly a swell newspaper writer. He said Davis wrote newspaper stuff in simple language and that he had a great trick of human interest.

He thought Davis was a bit of a snob toward other newspapermen, and loaded with affectations, but the veteran said that had nothing to do with his ability. It was his opinion that if Davis had come along in these days as a young fellow he would have gone immediately to the movies and never been heard of as a writer. He said "Dick" had plenty of that old hamborious in him.

Davis' glamour had commenced to fade somewhat when the World War came on. The veteran said he thought a fair commentary on his newspaper ability lay in the fact that Jack Wheeler, the syndicate fellow, induced Davis to go to Europe to report the war and Davis was in Belgium when the German army swept through that country and he turned out a story that to this day is accounted one of the greatest pieces of reportorial work the war produced.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The code of ethics, always a delicate subject, is becoming more clear-cut and well defined because of the increasing conscientious interest of bridge players.

It is a healthy sign when letters pour in, asking, "Is this ethical, is that ethical," for it indicates that players are desirous of maintaining a fair and sporting game.

Today's hand, while it relates to no point in the ethical code, reveals that a double against a slam, no matter how seemingly reasonable, is rarely ever safe against a shrewd player. The Blackwood Convention featured in the bidding of the hand, which H. R. S. describes as follows:

"The accompanying hand, I think fairly illustrates the lure, the peril and the thirll of the unexpected that lurks in the Blackwood Convention.

Curiosity Killed a Cat

"I was South and have no excuse for my four-no-trump bid except a sudden, overpowering curiosity to find out by the easy Blackwood route whether my partner held the other two aces. She did, and, of course, was obliged to respond with five hearts. At that point I should have signed off with five spades. But no—having gone that far I had to find out where the three missing kings were and so bid five no-trump, and when my partner necessarily bid six clubs it sure looked gloomy.

Luck Will Find a Way

"Naturally, I had to bid six spades, and when West doubled I would have sold out for a 500-point set. My partner's redouble was the pay-off. Then the miracle developed. West opened with the nine of clubs, top of nothing, which I took in my own hand with the ace. I returned a small club trumped low in the dummy and led the ace of hearts, and then the queen. When East came up with the king I began to see a gleam of light. I trumped in my own hand and led a low trump to the dummy's ace. When West's ten of trumps dropped it suddenly came over me that I was home. All I had to do was lead hearts until East trumped, then overtrump. The rest was easy.

"We made a grand slam (one overtrick) doubled and redoubled, vulnerable, against the equivalent of three quick tricks, three kings and three queens, in East's hand. East's comments are not quotable. Glory be to Blackwood!"

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

NOTES from Senator Ellender's Hearing Room: The Senator yesterday repeated that he is having some difficulty in getting witnesses to appear and testify about "petty czarism" in the service . . . They are afraid of reprisals, he said and Ellender says that this attitude is understandable to him . . . This column was told after the hearing yesterday about a man who has a honey of a case involving the Navy Department, but he is afraid to talk . . . But this column doesn't believe that any reprisals will result from the testimony—Ellender is too emphatic in his assertions that he will blast out any reprisal that shows its head.

AFTER each hearing, he has taken the Government chiefs aside, and, speaking persuasively, requested them to hold nothing against the witnesses . . . The chiefs have given Ellender their word on it . . . This column has been asked this question by everyone who has informally discussed the hearing: "What will come from all of this?" . . . Just off-hand, we would say that a great soul searching will come from it . . . Ellender, to this minute, at least, has dealt only with cases of a universal nature . . . His case of Wednesday, which dealt with the promotion of a secretary by an administration officer, could not be singled out as a case solely concerning the Postoffice Department . . . The leaping of grades occurs all over town . . . And it was regrettable that this one administrative officer had to take the fall and be singled out into the public notice, when a whole regiment might have been marched into the hearing room to face a similar charge . . . It may be poor comfort now, but the gentleman who took the fall at the Wednesday hearing can smile through his tears in the knowledge that the charge brought against him was one that could as well have been brought against other gentlemen in the east side, the west side and all around this Federal town.

SO, for this very reason, we repeat that a great soul searching will take place. No sooner had the newspapers hit the street with accounts of the ordeal undergone by William J. Dixon, of the Postoffice Department, than hundreds of other administrative officers must have mumbled: "In that hearing room, but for the Grace of God, would have been I."

SO if the hearings bring about this form of introspection, they will have done some good. And, further, the hearings will bring to the attention of Congress a fact the Congress has long ignored: that the personnel systems in the Federal Government are a muddle and a mess and the only way of correcting it would be through a strict merit system, administered by financially equipped Civil Service Commission and a commission with razor edged teeth and a chip on its shoulder.

IF there are any reds in the WPA—as some have alleged—a tincturing element will now be mixed in. M. M. Rockwell and A. D. MacKinnon write us: "An association is being formed of World War veterans who are now employed in the WPA Administrative Offices in Washington . . . We are proud of our Government. In our hearts we all strive to be better employes. This organization will bind us all together in working to a common end—efficiency and loyalty. Such an organization of men who have served their country in war and who are now working for it in peace can bring to us many benefits." The first meeting will be held in the Projection Room, Nineteenth and New York avenue, at 5:30 p. m. Tuesday.

HAS the Postoffice Department more 6-cent stamps than it can sell? The question arises because a man comes in with a government press release contained in an envelope bearing 6-cent postage. What sort of an innovation is this? . . . The Navy Department will be the next to have its employes fingerprinted, following on heels of the War Department. . . . The Georgia State Society dances tomorrow night at the Shoreham; the reception committee, mostly of Government people, are: Harry L. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ingramm, Capt. and Mrs. J. K. Stacy, Mr. and Mrs. James Mangum, Gertrude Lloyd, Julia Harris, Tom Hardman, Walter Marion Hiley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook, and Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Tarver, jr. . . . Now comes a telephone call about that 6-cent stamp on a press release: a stamp collector calls in to say it might be valuable because the "penalty-for-private-use-to-avoid-payment-of-postage (the usual thing on a ranked envelope) is marked over the stamp. We don't understand these values, but the stamp collectors are getting excited about it.

Bob Burns Says—

I went to a concert the other night with a very scholarly friend of mine. It was given by one of the most outstandin' violinists of the day. When he played the whole audience sat there jest like they were in a trance.

After the concert was over I says to my intellectual friend, "How can one man have such a great talent? Is he just born with it?"

And my friend says, "No, research shows us that in every case of a genius it is inherited from some ancestor."

From the concert we went to an art exhibit, and the first prize was won by one of them cubist painters. You know, the kind that has all them squares, and triangles, and circles mixed together in different colors.

I says, "You don't mean to tell me the man who painted that inherited his talents?"

And my friend says, "Yes, I happen to know that his great-grandmother was a great hand at making crazy quilts."

District Road Offices Sought in Romney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Romney, W. Va., March 30.—Romney has organized to carry on the fight to have the district offices of the State Road Commission moved here from Keyser. At a meeting of more than 150 business men and political workers, a memorial to Gov. Holt was adopted, calling for the change for "geographical, economical and political reasons."

A parade was led by the high school and town bands and the marchers carried banners calling for the change.

Bedtime Story

Harrier Does His Share

Who truly loves will seek to share
Responsibility and care.
—Harrier the Marsh Hawk.

There were eggs in the nest of the Marsh Hawks over on the Green Meadows not far from the dear Old Briar-patch. Peter Rabbit knew it. He knew it by the fact that always one or the other of them was on that nest. If Mrs. Harrier wanted to stretch her wings, and perhaps do a little hunting on her own account, Harrier would take her place. There was nothing of the shirk about him. He was always on hand to do his share of whatever needed to be done. He paid Mrs. Harrier a lot of attention.

Little Mrs. Peter, watching from the Briar-patch, took note of this and reminded Peter that he might profit from Harrier's example. Perhaps Peter didn't hear. Anyway he took no notice of the remark. Probably Mrs. Peter hadn't expected that he would. She knew Peter. Long ago she learned not to expert too much.

"I wonder how many eggs they have in that nest," said Peter as with Mrs. Peter he watched Harrier relieve Mrs. Harrier.

"What difference does it make to you, how many there are? If you ask me it is none of your business," said little Mrs. Peter.

"It isn't any business of mine and it doesn't make any difference to me personally how many eggs there are," he admitted. He chewed on a blade of grass then added. "It may make a difference to the children though."

Mrs. Peter looked startled. "Whose children?" she asked.

"Ours," was Peter's brief reply.

Mrs. Peter looked troubled and anxious. "I don't see what those eggs have to do with our children or what difference it makes how many there may be," said she.

"What will come from those eggs?" Peter asked.

"Why babies of course, baby Hawks. What a foolish question," retorted Mrs. Peter.

"And the more eggs there are the more young Hawks there will be," said Peter.

"Of course," said Mrs. Peter. "Don't be silly."

"And the more young Hawks there are the more food they will have to have, and the more those two will hunt. You know as well as I do that baby Rabbits are never safe where those Hawks can see them and catch them," said Peter.

"Oh!" exclaimed Mrs. Peter in alarm. "I hadn't thought of that."

"It takes twice as much food to feed two growing youngsters as it does to feed one," said Peter.

Mrs. Peter nodded and looked more distressed than ever.

"And three times as much food to feed three," said Peter.

"You don't suppose they have more than three, do you?" cried Mrs. Peter, and there was no doubt about her anxiety.

"There may be four. It seems to me I remember that they raised a family of four one year," replied Peter.

"I hope it is only three," murmured Mrs. Peter.

What would she have said could she have peeped into that nest? You see it contained no less than six eggs. Yes, sir, it contained six eggs, the most Mrs. Harrier ever had laid in one season. She was very proud of them and so was Harrier although both knew that six growing children would mean ceaseless hunting from dawn to dark every day. With such prospects it was well for Mrs. Harrier that she had a mate willing to do his share. He did it now, relieving her whenever she became tired of sitting on those egg, and doing it willingly. And she knew that when the eggs hatched and there were hungry little mouths to be fed Harrier would do his full share in providing for them. It was a comforting feeling. Harrier the Marsh Hawk is a good mate and a good father.

Judge Indicates U. S. Lacks Case Against Rhodes

Jury Gets Holiday As Adkins Studies Plea for Acquittal

Jurors trying Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association, for perjury, were given a holiday until Monday as Justice Adkins took under advisement a defense motion for an instructed verdict of acquittal.

Justice Adkins expressed doubts that the evidence offered by the Government in the first three days of the trial was enough to require Rhodes to present a defense.

Rhodes, who has been a lawyer here 40 years as well as a financier, is accused of knowingly swearing to a report to the Treasury which showed the liabilities to be $77,000 less than they actually were.

William E. Leahy, who is associated with William E. Richardson in defending Rhodes, ridiculed the idea that Rhodes knew the report was not true. He told Justice Adkins that the evidence showed the report was prepared by expert accountants employed by the Fidelity and that later members the board of directors examined and approved it. The sworn signature of the president, Leahy argued, was merely a matter of form and he ought not to be made to present a defense to a perjury charge without better evidence of wrongful intentions.

Mrs. Ruth S. Horner, former assistant secretary-treasurer of the Fidelity, was briefly a Government witness, who identified numerous documents. Leahy accused the Government of neglecting to ask her about details of many transactions and argued that this raised a presumption that complete testimony would help the defense.

"Wouldn't the jury be justified in assuming that Mrs. Horner's testimony would be adverse (to the prosecution)?" Justice Adkins asked Assistant District Attorney Wilson.

Wilson disclaimed such a presumption and said that instead the jury might suppose Mrs. Horner's testimony to be "colored" because she is at present employed in Rhodes' law office.
